

RES. TAFT FOR SIX-YEAR TERM

President Taft's Great Speech Before in New York

ALLS IT HIS "SWAN SONG"

Views Events of Administration and Questions of National Welfare

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—President Taft sang his "swan song" as chief of the nation tonight. As guest of the Lotus club, the president responded to the toast, "The President." In a speech which many of his listeners considered the most remarkable he has ever made.

He shifted from grave to gay and in the philosophy which he said four years in the White house had taught him to a discussion of the problems which face the nation. He laughed at the outcome of the election, smiled as he spoke of some of the plans of President-elect Woodrow Wilson, and ended with gentle sarcasm William McKinley Bryan.

His chief regret, the president said, was that he had been unable to influence the United States senate to ratify the arbitration treaties with Great Britain. In spite of the fact, he asked his audience to believe that he would leave office with dearest gratitude to the American people for the honor they had given him and with the belief that high progress had been accomplished in his administration to warrant the feeling that he had done real work for his country.

President Taft said in part:

TAFT ON TOAST,
"THE PRESIDENT"

I saw in the name of your club the ability that you were organized to bring an opportunity for a "swan song" to those about to disappear. I gladly took it. It was well to cast an eye to the windward and accept as a real consolation as I could gather such a hospitable presence as and therefore, my friends, I accept your invitation and am here.
You have given me the toast of "The President." It is said that the office of the president is the most powerful in the world because under the constitution's occupant really can exercise discretion than an emperor or exercises in any of the governments of modern Europe. I am not used to question this as a matter arising from the actual power of the president in the constitution. I am bound to say that the possess of such power is rarely granted in the mind of the ordinary individual acting as president.
One who chiefly shares him in the in carrying out any plan of his limitation on the power and not content.

OF EXECUTIVE TIMES LIMITED

In course, there are happy instances who are able entirely to escape these limitations both in mind and practice, and as to them the may be different. But to one training and profession is subject to law, the intoxication of others off in the knowledge of

CIDENTS LEADING UP TO LOS ANGELES EXPLOSION NARRATED

Namara Offered Woman Month's Rent for Concealment Night of Times Wreck

DIANAPOLIS, Nov. 15.—Incidents leading up to the Los Angeles explosion were narrated by Frank Eckhoff, who was in the wreck of which 21 persons were killed, were blended into a dramatic story by 19 witnesses from the scene. At the "dynamite company" trial today.
The dynamite rented a furnished room in Mrs. Lena Ingersoll's San Francisco; how he got in with F. A. Schmidt and David his alleged accomplices, how he blended from the flat to procure gasoline launch "Pastime," and to 500 pounds of 80 per cent nitrogen, and how, after fixing the Los Angeles Times explosion to occur on October 1, 1910, he returned in San Francisco, and at 11 o'clock night begged Mrs. Ingersoll to allow him to remain there, offering whole month's rent, were details given by people who had personal knowledge of the events.
Had Narrow Escape.
Eckhoff told how a cottage
by him in Nineteenth avenue, southern part of San Francisco, been rented before the Los Angeles explosion, and how, when several weeks later he went there to

THE MAN WHO WON

DENVER MAN SHOT BY BOYHOOD ENEMY

M. A. Root Roused From Bed
by Intruder, Who Fires
at Him

DENVER, Nov. 16.—M. A. Root, member of a Denver tobacco firm, was shot and seriously wounded early today at his home by a man whom he says he recognized as a boyhood enemy at Ripon, Wis. The bullet passed through the body just below the heart.
Root was taken to the county hospital and at noon it was said there was a chance for his recovery.

According to Root's story, he was awakened about 1:45 o'clock by a noise in his bedroom and looked into the revolver in the hands of a man standing at the foot of the bed. Root said he grappled with the intruder and was shot in the mole.

The intruder escaped through the window before Mrs. Root, who slept on the first floor, arrived.

Root said the trouble started shortly after he left school in Wisconsin, when his home was burglarized. He said he recognized the burglar as James Divinney, whom he had arrested, convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary. At that time, 1870, Root declares that Divinney swore vengeance.

Several times in the last 15 years since he has resided in Denver, Root has been attacked and shot at and once locked in his safe and nearly suffocated. On each occasion, Root declares, he recognized his assailant as Divinney.

W. H. SWEET WILL GIVE CORNERSTONE ADDRESS

Prominent Denver Speaker to Talk at Y. W. C. A.
Ceremonies to Be Held Here Next Tuesday

Arrangements for the program, Tuesday noon at the laying of the cornerstone of the building that will be the future home of the Colorado Springs Young Women's Christian association, which are in charge of a committee composed of Mrs. Clarence P. Dodge, chairman, the Rev. Arthur
N. Taft and Dr. William Frederick Slocum, have been practically completed. At noon the directors and secretaries of the association, the vested chairs of the city, and all who are to assist in the program, will march in procession from the city hall to the site of the building at the corner of Klova street and Nevada avenue.

The principal address will be given by William H. Sweet of Denver, a prominent business man and president of the Young Men's Christian association of that city. Clarence P. Dodge will preside at the ceremonies. The program for the exercises is as follows:
Processional Hymn—"Holy, Holy, Holy."
Opening Sentences.
The Rev. W. W. Ramsey, D. D.
Invocation.
The Rev. Samuel Garvin, D. D.
The Lord's Prayer.
Hymn—"Our Father, God to Thee."
Introduction of the Speaker.
Address by William H. Sweet.
Laying of the Cornerstone—Mrs. Mary
T. Hatch, first president of the Colorado Springs association. Miss Ellen
T. Brinley, president, 1912-1913.
Hymn—"How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord."
Closing Prayer and Benediction.
The Rev. J. H. Spencer, D. D.
Recessional Hymn—"The Church's One Foundation."
Alexander Pirie will have charge of the music of the service.
The stands for the speakers, the

MRS. MARY T. HATCH,
First president of the Colorado Springs
Y. W. C. A., who will lay the cornerstone of the new building next Tuesday.

PROGRESSIVES TO MEET IN DENVER FRIDAY TO FORM LEGISLATIVE PLAN

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.
DENVER, Nov. 16.—Next Friday a conference of Colorado Progressives will be held in Denver. The official call for which will be issued within a day or so by Chairman Allison Stocker of the Progressive party. The conference will be attended by the newly-elected Progressive officials, specially by those elected to the legislature, and also by leading Progressives from all over the state.
The main purpose of the gathering will be to outline a legislative program for the coming session of the legislature. The Progressives will have a small but high-class representation in both the senate and house, and it is believed that by outlining a program in advance and fighting for its adoption much can be accomplished in the way of showing the state where the Progressives stand on all public questions.
Plans will also be made for continuing the organization of the new party in every county of the state. Special efforts will be made to build up the party in those counties where weakness was shown in the recent election. As one method of continuing the interest in the Progressive party the state central committee is encouraging the formation of Progressive clubs in every city and county.

JUDGE PERKY NAMED SUCCESSOR SENATOR HEYBURN OF IDAHO

ROSE, La., Nov. 16.—Governor James H. Hawley decided at the last moment today not to resign his office to accept the appointment as United States senator at the hands of Lieutenant Governor Sweetser, and this afternoon appointed Judge K. I. Perky of Belle, to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Heyburn.
Governor Hawley, in a statement tonight, said that the acceptance of the United States senatorship from Lieutenant Governor Sweetser would be practically the same as appointing himself and that he would not take the office under that condition.
Judge Perky is a native of Wayne county, Ohio, and came to Idaho in 1894. He was appointed judge of the fourth judicial district in 1901 and was state Democratic chairman in 1906. He took part in the senatorial contest which resulted in the defeat of former Senator Dubois.

PUBLICITY AS MEANS TO CURTAIL DIVORCE

Springs Judges Plan Action to Make Separations Less Common

Thorough investigation of causes of domestic discord as reflected in complaints, elimination of the granting of divorces by default by compelling defense, and then publicity through the newspapers, are corrective for the spread of the divorce evil, recommended by Judge John E. Little, of the county court, who has been elected to the district bench.
Four years ago the divorce laws of Colorado were modified so that their interpretation is rather ambiguous.
The local courts decided that under the new law there is no necessity to appoint an attorney to represent an absent defendant.

But the former system never was omitted in Denver, and in the opinion of Judge Little, the interests of society demand that its continuance should be resumed here.

No Divorce by Default.

He will consult with his associates on the district bench with regard to resuming the former system in the local courts, to the end that divorces will not be permitted to be taken by default, and that if the defendant is not represented by an attorney the court shall appoint one for each case.

Under the statute a mutual agreement for divorce would invalidate the suit, and by compelling a defense, many ill-considered or hasty actions would be eliminated.

A dread of publicity of matrimonial disagreements can be made a check for divorce suits, in the opinion of Judge Little. "There is a law to the effect that clerks of the court shall not give out information of cases filed except to parties interested," he said, "until the case has gone to judgment. That gives a kind of excuse for suppressing the cases, which should not be permitted to exist."

There are rare instances where no good can be accomplished by publicity, and others where it is essential that the public be fully informed, particularly where the ethics of society have been violated or great wrongs committed.

Judge Little declares that the ultimate solution of the divorce problem lies in more rigid marriage restrictions, a closer application of the science of eugenics by making impossible, or illegal, the marriage of persons morally, physically or temperamentally unfit.

VICTOR HAS FIRE LOSS ESTIMATED AT $50,000

Conflagration Breaks Out Early in Morning Threatening Entire Block

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.
VICTOR, Nov. 15.—Fire, originating from a defective fuse in the portion of the building occupied by the Elks lodge, early today, caused a $50,000 loss to the building and Victor Hardware company. The entire stock of hardware is said to have been either destroyed by fire or damaged by water.
The furnishings of the Elks club were practically a complete loss. The hardware company carried insurance amounting to $50,000 on the stock, while the building is insured for $15,000.

BULGARIANS ARE ALMOST IN SIGHT OF TURKISH CAPITAL

Tchatalja Lines Are Broken and Enemy Is Drawing in on Turks; Can Hear Report of Battle From Constantinople

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The general advance of the Bulgarian army on the Turkish lines at Tchatalja, the main obstacle between it and Constantinople, has commenced, and, according to Sofia reports, already has met with some success.

The Bulgarians aim at attacking the forts, of which the line is composed, simultaneously, and with that object in view the army is stretched across the peninsula. With every available piece of artillery that could be gathered together it is marching straight toward the works which, until the Turks suffered the series of awful defeats, were considered by military experts as impregnable.

The advance guards of this great army of invasion have already reached the village of Lazarkou, near Lake Derkos, on the Turkish right, the town of Tchatalja facing the center of the line which takes its name from the town, and Arnaudou further to the south and near to the sea of Marmara.

BULGARIANS SHELLING TURKISH TOWN

ALL these places have been occupied and from Afentouli the Bulgarian artillery is shelling Byuk Chikmedye, where there are two Turkish forts, exposing the extreme left of the Turkish line.

At other points, too, the guns began to speak and from the hills around Constantinople firing can be heard. Some small reconnoitering parties have got around the flank of the Turks' right and are operating in the country between the Tchatalja lines and the capital. But the various divisions have only just commenced the attempt to make a breach which will give them an opening toward the city of their desire.

Those who have visited the Turkish front differ considerably as to the ability of the defenders to hold the forts. Some declare that the Turks, strengthened by reinforcement with an abundance of ammunition and provisions, will make a good stand while others cannot believe an army still containing remnants of forces so badly beaten in previous engagements, can hold out. In addition, cholera has invaded the camp, to further demoralize and dishearten them. And again, the Bulgarians will have the advantage of superior artillery.

UNLESS TURKS GIVE UP GREAT BATTLE IMMINENT

However, unless the Turks give up without a fight, there will be a battle, if possible, more sanguinary than any that has preceded it before peace can be secured in their efforts to end the conflict. Although the cost in life will be heavy, the Bulgarians would like to have the battle decided before an armistice is arranged, because, if the Turks beaten in their last ditch, it would be a long time before they could make further trouble for their neighbors.

Scutari, Adrianople and Monastir are still holding out against the allies, who keep up their bombardments. The Greeks are now heading toward Jannina and the Montenegrins, according to an unconfirmed report, have beaten the Serbians in the race to San Giovanni di Medua, which, it is said, they have taken.

Constantinople, at the gates of which the Bulgarians are knocking, is a city of sick, wounded and hungry refugees. With the thousands of wounded, in addition to cholera patients, all the hospitals are overtaxed. Some relief has been afforded by the action of the government in sending many refugees to Asia Minor.

YOUNG TURKS WOULD OVERTHROW GOVERNMENT

A revolution has been added to the other troubles of the Turkish government. The Young Turks, on whom much of the blame is placed for disaster, are suspected of being concerned in a movement to overthrow the government, and a section of them in a

FARM BANDITS ARE CAUGHT BY A POSSE

Terrific Battle Ensues Before Desperadoes Surrender to Officers

IOOLA, Kas., Nov. 15.—The three bandits who impressed an auto, a chauffeur and a mechanic here Thursday night, and went on a raid of farm houses and villages in this vicinity, were captured by a posse today near here and brought to the jail here.

The men gave their names as Richard Victor, who says he worked in the railroad shops at Argentine, Kas., and W. J. Van Ribber and McCaulay. Victor was taken early today. The two others were captured at noon after a fight in which one of them was wounded.

The posse had followed the chase since Friday morning. After a running fight today, in which one of the three men was wounded, Victor finally turned in at a house, held up the farmer at the point of his revolver, took one of the farmer's horses and before his pursuers reached the place, was gone. Overtaking one of his comrades, wounded and exhausted, Victor put the man on the horse before him and galloped on. The horse threw them, and when the posse came up, Victor lay on the ground stunned.

The other man dragged himself into the woods. Victor surrendered without a struggle.

The leader of the posse then telegraphed to Iola for reinforcements, and soon Sheriff Kerr and a number of men armed with rifles were racing for the scene in an automobile. The other two bandits were located in the brush near Galesburg, and there a fierce fight ensued. The men surrendered only after all their ammunition was gone. The bandits all are under 30 years old. Victor said the raid was planned in a saloon in Kansas City, Missouri.

The bandits obtained little booty in the raids on farm houses and garages. On Thursday night they tried to kidnap C. R. Hoyt, cashier of the Earlton bank. Stopping their motor car in front of Hoyt's house, they asked him to lead them tools to repair a puncture. Hoyt declined to leave the house and the bandits departed. They told the chauffeur they had intended to carry off the cashier and hold him for ransom.

Wilson Got Less Than Half of Vote Cast in Colorado

DENVER, Nov. 16.—With complete returns from 56 counties and partial reports from the other six in the state, Colorado gave Woodrow Wilson a plurality of 42,358 over Theodore Roosevelt in the recent election. The same returns show Roosevelt leading President Taft by 12,020.

The total vote cast, as shown by these returns, is 151,000, which is 3,287 more of the total vote in 1908. However, the precincts still unreported are expected to bring the popular vote in Colorado well above the figures of four years ago.

Based on the returns at hand, the Democrats polled for the national ticket about 14,000 less votes than in 1908, while the Republican and Progressive national candidates divided the Republican vote of that year. The Prohibition vote is expected to run about the same as in 1908, while it appears that the Socialists have increased their vote by more than 4,000. The available returns show that 14,457 votes were cast for Eugene Debs for president.

The reports received up to this afternoon give Wilson 110,231, Taft 5,913, Roosevelt, 67,935, Debs 14,457, and Reimer, 1,735.

Expresses Views of Stratton Home Trustees Regarding Institution

Giving the views and opinions of the trustees of the Myron Stratton estate in connection with recent statements that have been issued by various parties criticizing the actions of the trustees, William Lloyd, secretary of the estate, yesterday issued a general statement to the public.
He said that the contract for the first 13 buildings of the Stratton estate home would be let in the near future, and that construction work would be started at once and completed in a short time.
Various criticisms have been made regarding the issuing of the property, and the failure to sell the property, and the restrictions and under the prompt approval of an ever present and a not less kindly press, as well as by the kindly suggestions that not infrequently come from that hall of commonsense in which impeachments are initiated and that smaller chamber in which they are tried.

In these days of progress, reform, uplift and improvement, a man does not show himself a friend of the race unless he has some changes to suggest. It is the recommended change that marks his being up to date. It may be a change only for the sake of change, but it is responsive to a public demand, and, therefore, let's propose it.

It is contrary to my own love for the dear old Constitution to suggest any alteration in its terms, but it is regarded as a reflection on, or a criticism of that which has been put to the aged use for 125 years of maintaining the rights of the minority under the rule of the majority.

PROPOSES ONE TERM OF SIX YEARS FOR PRESIDENT.

But, yielding to the modern habit of just to show that, while I am a conservative, I am not a reactionary, I venture the suggestion that it would be the efficiency of the executive, and not his energy and attention, and not his subordination, in the latter part of his administration, upon what is purely disinterested public service, if he were made ineligible after serving one term of six years, either by succeeding or a nonconsecutive term.

I am a little specific in this matter because it seems necessary to be in order to be understood. I don't know how unambitious or modest a president is, but I don't know how determined he is that he himself will not serve a second term. I don't know how few leaders of the nation are still his subordinates, and I don't know how many of his subordinates are still his subordinates.

HOPES MUCKRAKING IS DRAWING TO A CLOSE.

I think the period of successful muckraking is gradually drawing to a close. I think the period of successful muckraking is gradually drawing to a close. I think the period of successful muckraking is gradually drawing to a close.

A GLOBE-WERNICKE Bookcase in the home encourages the whole family to reading habits. Its unit principle encourages library building, as it permits of classifications according to topics or authors, and extra units can be purchased as needed at a few dollars each. Its beauty and utility have made this the Globe-Wernicke period in bookcases.

Globe-Wernicke Bookcases are made in many styles and finishes to suit the color scheme of different interior styles.

STRIKERS FIRE ON PASSENGER TRAIN

CHARLESTON, Nov. 16.—A special passenger train on the Chesapeake and Ohio branch of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad tonight was fired upon by a mob of strikers and General Charles D. Smith, a squad of soldiers and several Chesapeake and Ohio officials were on the train at the time.

ONLY REGRET IS FAILURE OF FOREIGN TREATIES

My chief regret is my failure to secure from the senate the ratification of my general arbitration treaties with France and Great Britain. I am sure they would have been great steps toward general world peace. What has actually been done, I hope has helped the cause of peace. I do not despair of ultimate success. We must hope and work on.

I observe that the question of how the public business in the presence of everybody so that all who are interested might draw near to the executive office and stand and see and hear the communications from those who are appointed consultations with the head of the nation. This always settles down to an arrangement which settles the public business, but which allows those who have the most important business generally to have the easiest and longest access to the president. A president has just so much time to see people. No matter what is done, it will be certain that somebody's toes are stepped on.

WHAT'S TO BE DONE WITH EX-PRESIDENTS?

"What are we to do with our ex-presidents? I am not sure Dr. Bryan's method in dealing with them would not properly apply to the treatment of ex-presidents. The proper and scientific administration of a dose of chloroform to the fruit of the lotus tree might make a fitting end to the life of one who had held the highest office and at the same time would secure the country from the trouble some fear that the occupant could ever come back. It would relieve the country from the burden of thinking how he is to support himself and his family would fix his place in history and enable the public to pass on to new men and new measures. I commend this method for consideration.

REFERS TO THE BRYAN METHOD.

"I observe that my friend, Mr. Bryan, proposes another method of disposing of our ex-presidents. Mr. Bryan has not the exact experience of being a president. He has been a 'near president' three times, and possibly speaks of what we ought to do with our ex-presidents. He has been very vigorous in his campaign in helping to make me an ex-president, and, if I have followed with accuracy his public declarations and his private opinions, he is anxious to perform the office of making my successor an ex-president after one term. As a Warwick and a maker of ex-presidents, I think we should give great respectful consideration to his suggestion. Instead of ending the presidential life by chloroform or lotus eating, he proposes that it should expire under the anaesthetic effect of the debates of the senate. He proposes that ex-presidents should be confined to the business of sitting in the senate and listening to the discussions in that body. Why Mr. Bryan should think it necessary to add to the discussion in the senate the lucubrations of ex-presidents I am at a loss to say. If I must go and disappear into oblivion, I prefer to go by the chloroform or lotus method. It's pleasant and it's less drawn out."

ACQUITTIED ON CHARGE OF DEFRAUDING GOVERNMENT

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 16.—Eugene F. Meyer, formerly chief clerk of the storekeeper of the Puget Sound navy yard, was acquitted tonight of the charge of conspiracy to defraud the government in the purchase of supplies. The trial occupied three weeks. The amount of the government's loss by the alleged frauds in purchase of supplies was said to have been $50,000.

The pulp mills of Sweden require 2,200 tons of sulphur annually. Practically all of it comes from Sicily.

BULGARIANS ARE

7,000. In Montenegro there are 2,000 sick and wounded and about 4,000 prisoners.

The American Red Cross today collected $100 to the Greek Red Cross for use in the relief work. Similar amounts were collected by the Bulgarian and Serbian Red Cross organizations. This brings the total American Red Cross contributions up to $32,000.

RESERVISTS ARRIVE FROM UNITED STATES

SOFIA, Nov. 16.—Nearly 1,000 Bulgarian reservists from the United States arrived here today. Their enthusiasm was dampened by the announcement that they probably would not be permitted to go to the front. Some have already started for their homes in the provinces.

HEAR FIRING ALL DAY ALONG LINES

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 16 (10:30 p. m.)—Firing has been heard since morning from the various heights in the direction of Thessalonika but the nature or the result of the engagements has not been learned.

It is reported that Bulgarians have attacked the Turkish position at Bujuk Chekmekje.

VESSELS SUFFER FOR LACK OF ABLE PILOTS

By FREDERICK WERNER.
BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The consequences of the Russification of the Finnish pilot services are growing more and more disastrous. The past few weeks with their stormy weather, have been rich in misfortunes to vessels, owing to the inadequate and incompetent character of the pilot service. As how appears, moreover, that the northwest and northern parts of the country will suffer from lack of meat. The transport of supplies by sea has been so seriously restrained that supplies will have to be sent by rail, which will be very expensive, and cause a serious rise in the price of meat.

The prospects for next year's navigation are very black. The Caspian and other Russian pilots, who have replaced the Finnish pilots, are not at all inclined to remain in the Russian pilot service in Finland. At one pilot station the majority of the Caspian pilots already express their intention of not remaining here. Their example is likely to be followed by many others.

WOMEN TABU THE USE OF RIBBON NOWADAYS

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Ribbon, once so popular with the woman of fashion, has to a great extent disappeared from her attire.

"Those who used to wear hundreds and thousands of yards of ribbon in a season," said the manager of one of London's great millinery establishments, "now use only a few score of yards of galoon or narrow ribbon. Flowers and feathers are used instead."

restrictions and under the prompt sanction of an ever present and a not less considerate press, as well as his kindly suggestions that not infrequently come from that hall of congress in which imperfections are diluted and that smaller chamber in which they are tried.

"In these days of progress, reform, uplift and improvement, a man does not show himself abroad of the age unless he has some changes to suggest. It is the recommended change that marks his being up to date. It may be a change only for the sake of change, but it is responsive to a public demand, and, therefore, let's propose it."

PROPOSES ONE TERM OF SIX YEARS FOR PRESIDENT

"But, yielding to the modern habit of just to show that, while I am a conservative, I am not a reactionary, venture the suggestion that it would be the efficiency of the executive, and enter his energy and attention, and let of his subordinates, in the latter of his administration upon what is purely disinterested public service. If he were made ineligible after every one term of six years, either a succeeding or a nonconsecutive term."

HOPES MUCKRAKING IS DRAWING TO A CLOSE

"I think the period of successful muckraking is gradually drawing to a close, I hope so."

"We must consider that the ebullition in muckraking literature is only one of the temporary excesses of the times which is curbing itself by tiring those whose patronage failed the motive for its beginning and rise.

"Of course, the great and ready the only lasting satisfaction that one can have in the administration of the great office of president is the thought that one has done something permanently useful to his fellow countrymen. The mere enjoyment of the thrust of office is ephemeral and, unless one can fix one's memory on real progress made through the exercise of presidential power, there is little real pleasure in the contemplation of the holding of it."

"I beg you to believe that, in spite of the very emphatic verdict by which I leave the office, I cherish only the deepest gratitude to the American people for having given me the honor of having held office, and I sincerely hope, in looking back over what has been done, that there is enough of progress made to warrant me in the belief that real good has been accomplished, even though I regret that it has not been greater."

"My chief regret is my failure to secure from the senate the ratification of my general arbitration treaties with France and Great Britain. I am sure they would have been great steps toward general world peace. What has actually been done, I hope has helped the cause of peace. I do not despair of ultimate success. We must hope and work on."

"I observe that the question of how the public business in the presence of everybody so that all who are interested might draw near to the executive office and stand and see and hear the communications from those who are appointed consultations with the head of the nation. This device has been down to an arrangement which satisfies the public, but which allows those who have the most important business generally to have the easiest and longest access to the president. A president has just so much time to see people. No matter what is done, it will be certain that somebody's toes are stepped on."

WHAT'S TO BE DONE WITH EX-PRESIDENTS?

"What are we to do with our ex-presidents? I am not sure that the method in dealing with them now would not properly apply to the treatment of ex-presidents. The proper and scientific administration of a dose of chloroform or the fruit of the lotus tree might make a fitting end to the life of one who had held the highest office and at the same time would secure the country from the troublesome fear that the occupant could ever come back. It would relieve the country from the burden of thinking how he is to support himself and his family, would fix his place in history and enable the public to pass on to new men and new measures. I commend this method for consideration."

REFERS TO THE BRYAN METHOD

"I observe that my friend, Mr. Bryan, proposes another method of disposing of our ex-presidents. Mr. Bryan has not the exact experience of being a president. He has been a near president three times, and possibly that qualifies him as an expert to speak of what we ought to do with our ex-presidents. He has been very vigorous in his campaign in helping to make up an ex-president, and if I have followed with accuracy his public declarations and his private opinions, he is anxious to perform the office of making my successor, an ex-president after one term. Why Mr. Bryan should think it necessary to add to the discussion in the senate the lucubrations of ex-presidents I am at a loss to say. If I must go, and disappear into oblivion, I prefer to go by the chloroform or lotus method. It's pleasanter and it's less drawn out."

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF DEFAUDING GOVERNMENT

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 16.—Dawn R. Meyer, formerly chief clerk of the storekeeper of the Puget Sound navy yard, was acquitted tonight of the charge of conspiracy to defraud the government in the purchase of supplies. The trial occupied three weeks. The amount of the government's loss by the alleged frauds in purchase of supplies was said to have been $50,000.

The pulp mills of Sweden require 72,800 tons of sulphur annually. Practically all of it comes from Italy.

STRICKERS FIRE ON PASSENGER TRAIN

CHAMBERSTON, Pa., Nov. 16.—A passenger train on the Pennsylvania Railroad was fired on by strikers at night. A number of persons were injured, but no person was killed. An armed General Charles D. Smith, a squad of soldiers and several Chesapeake and Ohio officials were on the train at the time.

The special train had been sent to breakers to the mines, and it was returning to the city.

VESSLS SUFFER FOR LACK OF ABLE PILOTS

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—The consequences of the Russianification of the Finnish pilot services are growing more and more disastrous. The past few weeks have been rich in misfortune to vessels, owing to the inadequate and incompetent character of the pilot service. It now appears, moreover, that the northwestern and northern parts of the country will suffer from lack of meat. The transport of supplies by sea has been so seriously restrained that supplies will have to be sent by rail, which will be very expensive, and cause a serious rise in the price of meat.

The prospects for next year's navigation are very black. The Caspian and other Russian pilots, who have replaced the Finnish pilots, are not at all inclined to remain in the Russian pilot service in Finland. At one pilot station the majority of the Caspian pilots already express their intention of not remaining, and their example is likely to be followed by many others.

THE GLOBE-WERNICKE Bookcase

A case in the home encourages the whole family to reading habits. Its unit principle encourages library building, as it permits of classifications according to topics or authors, and extra units can be purchased as needed at a few dollars each. Its beauty and utility have made this the Globe-Wernicke period in bookcases.

Globe-Wernicke Bookcases are made in many styles and finishes to suit the color scheme of different interior rooms.

INCIDENTS LEADING UP

was known as "Schmidt," lived at the home of Mrs. Lavinia, a friend of Mrs. McNamara. It was in this way that McNamara was directed where to rent a room.

September 14, McNamara left Mrs. Lavinia's and went to a hotel. From the hotel, as testified by a telephone operator, most of the calls were made to the powder company for the purchase of the explosive and to the owners of the launch in Oakland.

Mrs. Lavinia said she did not again see McNamara until the night of October 1.

Offered Big Price for Room.

On October 1, McNamara called on the telephone and offered to give him a room. McNamara said he could not give him a room, but he would give him a launch for a fishing trip for a week or 10 days. They selected the gasoline launch "Pastime," but Stanley referred them to Edward H. Baxter and Allen D. Burroughs.

Changed Name of Boat.

These two owners testified that McNamara and Schmidt negotiated for the launch, finally me the rent of the boat for a week or 10 days, and he left. On the following night he called on the telephone and again wanted to come, and I again refused to allow him. That was the last I saw of him until after his arrest.

Mrs. Lavinia, who is a telephone operator in the San Francisco hotel, identified records of calls by McNamara to the powder company and to the launch owners.

She was corroborated by John Stanley, keeper of a boathouse at Alameda, across the bay from San Francisco. He testified that late in September two men identified as McNamara and Schmidt, who gave the name of F. A. Perry, said they wanted to rent a launch for a fishing trip for a week or 10 days. They selected the gasoline launch "Pastime," but Stanley referred them to Edward H. Baxter and Allen D. Burroughs.

These two owners testified that McNamara and Schmidt negotiated for the launch, finally agreeing to pay $10 for 10 days' rental and giving $10 cash security, which later, as testified by September 23, a written agreement was entered into, and McNamara, after being instructed how to run the launch, took possession of it.

The next step in the narrative was the testimony of Harrison M. Nutter, clerk in a hardware store in San Francisco, who sold $1.50 worth of aluminum letters to make two sets of the word "Pearless." In that way the original name, "Pastime," on the launch was disguised by the name "Pearless." The keeper of the boathouse, after the Times explosion, noticed that nails had been driven about the launch's name and paint had been applied, although, on its return, the craft bore its original name.

About the middle of September Bruce McCann, an employee of a powder company, testified he received a telephone call from the "Brice Construction Company" inquiring about the purchase of 500 pounds of high explosive to be used to blow up stumps on a ranch.

Got 80 Per Cent Explosive.

"I told the caller that 20 per cent was strong enough for that," said McCann, "but he insisted he wanted 80 per cent nitroglycerin. I replied we only made it 80 per cent, but we did not have it in stock. A man called and left an order for 500 pounds and paid the bill. He gave his name and left a rural address, saying he would call and get it in a launch."

Two days after the launch was rented, McCann testified, "Brice Construction Company" called on the telephone and said he would go in a launch to Giant Stallion down the bay to get the explosive.

"I told him he would have to come to the office and get a written order and I would have to know about the launch. He sent up a man later described as David Caplan. This man possessed not to know anything about the launch and had to go to Oakland to find out. When he returned I gave him an order for the delivery to him of 500 pounds of 80 per cent."

James O. O'Brien and August Mielie told the contents of the San Francisco police records in which the explosive was stored.

Several weeks later, passing the house, I thought it was queer that the people had not moved in," said O'Brien, the owner.

Notified the Police.

"I had a key and entered. I noticed that all the rooms were empty, but the front room was locked. Opening that I saw 10 boxes partly covered with tarpaulin. One of the boxes was opened but the others were filled, weighing about 50 pounds each. I pulled out one stick in the opened box, thinking it was a candle. I was smoking and I knocked the stick against the box to see what it was. I noticed the sticks were marked nitroglycerin, 80 per cent. That was enough for me. I said 'good night' and ran to tell the police."

Frank D. Carroll, police detective of Los Angeles, told about the condition of the wrecked Times building when he arrived there at 7 a. m. He also described the contents of a bomb found on the premises of Felix Zechandlar. It contained 15 sticks of the explosive, a dynamite cap, fuse, battery and a clock.

Eckhoff, a friend and neighbor of the McNamara family in Cincinnati, after telling how he met James B. McNamara in a Nebraska town and assisted in the dynamite's return east by way of Chicago, and Omaha, on cross-examination admitted that knowing the dynamite had killed persons in Los Angeles he realized the precautions necessary to conceal his identity.

Demanded "Hush" Money.

That he demanded $500 from the McNamaras "to keep his mouth shut," threatening if they did not pay he would inform the authorities.

That after the McNamara were arrested he repeated his demand for $500 but received no response.

That detectives working on the Los Angeles case took him to Cleveland, and there for a time kept him hidden, so that he might be questioned by McNamara's attorneys.

"You mean to say that if McNamara had paid you the money you would not have now to testify against these defendants?" asked Attorney William M. Harding for the defense.

"Probably not," said Eckhoff.

Eckhoff said that long before the loss of life at Los Angeles he knew James B. McNamara was dynamiting jobs. He said he himself was sent to blow up a job in Cincinnati for which he was promised $50, but he met the watchman and did not go in. He said McNamara had a "hiding place" for nitroglycerin in the woods on a hill about a quarter of a mile from the McNamara home and about five miles north of Fountain Square.

The railroads of Newfoundland total 4,534 miles.

Money in Transit to Wyoming Coal Mines Taken From Mail Car

$10,000 IS STOLEN

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., Nov. 15.—It became known today that $10,000 in currency was disappeared from the mail while en route from here to the coal mines at Superior. So far, the government agents have been able to obtain no clue to its disappearance. The money should have reached Superior last Thursday, to meet the payroll.

Federal operators are working on the theory that the money was taken from the mail car, and not at the post-office either here or at Superior. Three months ago an attempt to steal a like sum was prevented, and three men were arrested, but not convicted.

splendid institutions, and its new buildings will be a distinct addition to the city and its life. It is fitting that the ceremonies incident to the laying of the cornerstone be observed in a proper manner by the citizens of this community. The board of directors of the Colorado Springs Chamber of Commerce therefore joins with the mayor in the request that all places of business be closed during the hour from 12 to 1 o'clock noon Tuesday, November 19, 1912. In this request, the Retail Merchants division of the Chamber of Commerce heartily concurs. It is desirable that all persons have an opportunity to participate in these exercises, and the Chamber of Commerce hopes that there will be a general compliance with this suggestion.

The ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the new structure will be one of especial significance to members of the association and of much interest to the general public, and it is expected a large crowd will attend the exercises.

Building Will Be Imposing.

Work on the building started more than a month ago, and the future home of the association will be one of the finest in the west. It will be five stories high, fireproof, and will be built of brick, with reinforced concrete floors, at a cost of $75,000. At the present headquarters of the Y. W. C. A., accommodations have become cramped, owing to constantly increasing membership, but this condition will not prevail at the new home. The top story will be given over to the kitchen and cafeteria, while the third and fourth will be used for dormitories. The general office, rest rooms, assembly hall and class rooms will be located on the first and second floors. Plans call for a gymnasium, but this is not to be built at present. Thomas J. Wright, who has the contract, expects to have the building completed within the next nine months.

For good coal quick, call W. E. S. C. M. Sherman.

CHICAGO MAN MAY BUY SALT LAKE TRACTION CO.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 15.—That negotiations are on for the sale of the Salt Lake and Ogden Electric railway to eastern interests represented here by M. B. Horeley, a traction expert of Chicago, was admitted today by Simon Bamberger, the president of the company.

The deal, if consummated, will involve millions and it is said by those interested that other millions will be forthcoming to extend the traction system north from Ogden and south from Salt Lake City.

EPLING SNEED'S PARTNER IS RELEASED ON BOND

AMARILLO, Tex., Nov. 15.—By agreement of counsel, followed by an order of the court, bond for Beach T. Epling, charged jointly with J. B. Sneed with the murder of M. G. Boyce, Jr., here on September 14, was set today at $20,000. Epling was to have been given a hearing on an application for habeas corpus during the coming week.

The bond was filed, Joseph Sneed, brother of J. B. Sneed, being among the sureties, and Epling was released from custody on an order of the court to the sheriff of Hall county, where the case will be tried on a change of venue.

FIVE WORKMEN KILLED IN DYNAMITE EXPLOSION

WESTCHESTER, Pa., Nov. 15.—Five workmen, including Foreman Bernard Gallagher, were killed by an explosion of dynamite in a quarry here today. A laborer carrying a box of the explosive, stumbled and dropped it. The dynamite exploded.

LAW MAY PREVENT A CONTEST IN CAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—Theodore Roosevelt's plurality over Woodrow Wilson in California was 119, according to latest compilations tonight. Again of 20 came through the official returns from the counties as received at the office of Secretary of State Frank C. Pardon at Sacramento.

At Los Angeles, the supervisors, over the protests of the Democrats, took up a short method of count of over 900 contested precincts, in which the Democrats assert at least 170 ballots were wrongly counted.

The operation now being conducted by the supervisors is simply the certification of returns as made by precinct election judges. Under their canvass, the usual method of scrutinizing the tally marks of vote counters has no place, the supervisors announcing that they assume the certification of returns as made by precinct judges to be correct.

The count now in progress does not affect the 35 precincts involved in mandamus proceedings already brought by the Democrats. The alternative writ of mandamus is returnable Monday.

Assistant District Attorney W. J. Ford of Los Angeles county, in a formal opinion to the election board, stated today that the California law provides for election contests only where county and city officials are involved, and that no contest can be made against electors, who are state officers. The Democratic law committee reached about the same conclusion a day or so ago.

Rudolph Spreckels of San Francisco, millionaire president of the Progressive Republican league, obtained permission from the Los Angeles board of supervisors today to check off certain precincts and did so.

Later, he said his work was not finished.

Suffragettes Finish Long Hike in England

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The suffragette army which started from Edinburgh on October 12, completed its 400-mile tramp to London this afternoon having taken exactly five weeks to make the journey. Under the leadership of Mrs. Leppont F. Blandine who traveled on horseback, they went immediately to the prime minister's residence in Downing street and presented their petition demanding suffrage for women.

Premier Asquith, profiting from his experience of previous meetings with the vote-seeking women had retired to his country for the week end. His secretary, however, accepted the document and there was no untoward incident.

FORMER SENATOR LORIMER OPERATED ON AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—William Lorimer, former United States senator, is lying tonight from the effects of an operation for appendicitis performed today at the Presbyterian hospital. It is probable Mr. Lorimer will be able to leave the hospital in about two weeks.

MAYOR GOES ON OWN BOND AND IS RELEASED

AMERICAN TRAVELERS
WANT SERVICE FIRST

According to officials of the Santa Fe, the new era of extra service railroading inaugurated by the Santa Fe de Luxe train, a year ago, is now firmly established. This train of luxury running once a week in each direction between Chicago and Los Angeles was so successful last year that it will be continued during the coming winter season, the first departure being from Chicago, December 10, and then every Tuesday until April.

Although the de Luxe makes faster time from lakes to coast by several hours than the next fastest train on any railroad its primary object is not speed, but service. That is why the passenger pays the extra fare, not to save a few hours en route, but in the hope of the eastern lines, but mainly to get extra service on a train with that of the finest class and have its distinctive individual and exclusive. Not how fast but how good perhaps best phrase is this new departure in transcontinental travel. And the public seem to like it, they indicate that American railroads all agreed.

Even the snail pace of the de Luxe gives distinction to the buffet, dining car, two all day long in Pullman, one of the eastern lines, but mainly to get extra service on a train with that of the finest class and have its distinctive individual and exclusive. Not how fast but how good perhaps best phrase is this new departure in transcontinental travel. And the public seem to like it, they indicate that American railroads all agreed.

On board the train the traveler finds a service which is not only a wish and a dream, but a reality. In the train of the de Luxe, the traveler finds a service which is not only a wish and a dream, but a reality. In the train of the de Luxe, the traveler finds a service which is not only a wish and a dream, but a reality.

On board the train the traveler finds a service which is not only a wish and a dream, but a reality. In the train of the de Luxe, the traveler finds a service which is not only a wish and a dream, but a reality.

This second edition of the de Luxe train is to be even more popular than the first. It is to be even more popular than the first. It is to be even more popular than the first.

Deaths and Funerals

MRS. MARY E. REED DEAD
Mrs. Mary E. Reed, aged 71, widow of George L. Reed, died at 6 o'clock last evening at her home, 920 South Cascade street. She had been ill for two months, and this was indirectly the cause of her death. Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning at the undertaking rooms of J. L. & Law, the Rev. Merle N. Smith officiating. The body will be taken to Wray, Kan., for interment. Mrs. Reed had lived in Colorado Springs since 1899, coming here from Mulvane, Kan. She leaves seven children, many grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Her children are W. F. Reed of Anshute, Tex.; John A. Reed of Wichita, Kan.; Mrs. R. S. Hunter of Wellington, Kan.; and Ella J. Josephine and George G. Reed of this city.

Word has been received here of the death of C. A. Bupard at Long Island, Kan. Mr. Bupard was the father of Mrs. A. H. Fisher of Trappan, Mex., who with Mr. Fisher graduated from Colorado college in 1907. Mr. Fisher is the son of Mrs. J. W. Moore of Irvyville, and will be in Colorado Springs next week for a visit.

"77" FOR GRIP & COLDS

Everybody says that Colds hang on most tenaciously this fall, especially for so early in the season, before the bad weather sets in. This is the best reason in the world for keeping the remedy at hand. It is well known that Dr. Humphreys' "Seventy-seven" taken at the first feeling of lassitude, the first chill or shiver, will break up a Cold without delay. Don't wait till you begin to cough and sneeze or it may take longer. A small vial of pleasant pellets, fits the vest pocket. At your Druggist 25c or mailed. Humphreys' Home, Mott's Co. Cor. Y. W. C. A. Notes

The vesper service of this afternoon will be a service in connection with the Mission week, November 17-24. Robert B. Wolf will speak, her subject to be "Our Greatest Opportunity."
 Miss Helene Barbee will sing. The service will be in charge of Mrs. Charles Samsing. All women are cordially invited to be in the association rooms this hour.

Members of the association are looking forward to the members banquet to be given in the assembly room, Thursday, November 21, at 6:30 p. m. The dining capacity of the room is limited 240 so that tickets should be purchased at once to insure a place. Admission will be by ticket only as every seat will be sold by Tuesday noon. The menu is as follows:

Tomato Cream Soup
 Celery
 Roast Turkey
 Chestnut Dressing
 Shred Potatoes
 Cranberry Jelly
 Hot Rolls
 Fruit Salad
 Ice Cream
 Assorted Sticks

The program for the evening is as follows:
 Miss Inez Kinney, executive secretary

 N. Van den Arend.
 Colo. Miss Winifred Fairley.
 Mrs. Lois H. Allen.
 Miss Ruth Benson.
 Y. W. C. A. quartet.
 Miss Rhoda E. McCulloch.

In order that all employees may attend the service of Tuesday noon in connection with the laying of the cornerstone of the association building the lunch room will be closed slightly its hours of serving. Lunch will be served from 11:35 until 1:45 and will then be discontinued until 1 o'clock. The doors will be opened at 1 promptly—lunch to be served until 2 o'clock.

The Sunday afternoon vesper service of November 24 is to be a Thanksgiving service. Prof. M. C. Gile will speak. Mrs. Marie Briscoe will give a violin solo. All who have known of the struggle of the association to secure a new building will be interested in this Sunday afternoon service.

The Good Fellowship club has issued invitations for a party to be given in the association assembly room Wednesday evening.

For the benefit of those who wish to learn to make satin roses and violets there will be two class lessons given Friday, November 29, and Friday, December 6 at 3 p. m. in the association rooms, 326 DeGraff building. Further announcement concerning these classes will be given later. All who are interested in this work should apply at once for entrance to the classes.

Because of the members banquet Thursday evening, Miss Hodd's sewing class will meet Friday evening instead of the scheduled time.

Camp Fire Notes.
 The camp of the Blue Bird of the Camp Fire Club is planning an outing to Palmer Lake for next Friday and Saturday. Mrs. Daniel Rupp, the guard, is very anxious to have all of the members who are going, phone her the first of the week.

Y. M. C. A. Notes

Tomorrow evening the Y. M. C. A. will entertain the three teams that are taking up the membership campaign the following day. It is the intention of those comprising the teams to get in touch with the young men of the city, who are not already interested in or familiar with the work and attraction of the association. Aside from its splendid equipment the following reasons are given why young men should be connected with the local association:

It is a high-grade, low-cost young men's club. Christmas has come. It is an athletic organization that does not use men to promote athletics, but uses athletics to develop men. It is a home for young men away from home. It helps young men not only to help themselves, but to help others. It is a place for a young man to find friends and to make himself a friend to the man who needs friends. It has no creed, but is controlled by representatives of churches. This keeps it a Christian organization, but prevents it from becoming another church. Its fellowship, club rooms, gymnasium, baths, classes and all other practical advantages are open to all young men, of all faiths or of no faith. It is not an experiment, but is the survivor of many experiments. While other young men's organizations, social, athletic, educational, ethical and religious, have failed, this has succeeded and is now in successful operation in more than 2000 places in North America and throughout the world. It is in Colorado Springs to stay, to grow with the growth of the city, and to safeguard and develop its greatest asset, its growing man.

PRINCESS THEATRE

"When Lee Surrenders" will be shown at this theatre tomorrow, Monday. This picture is in two grand parts and is one of the biggest pictures ever produced for a moving picture house. You will see $2,000 worth of powder burned in this one film. One thousand soldiers engage in battle, horses and riders shot down in full gallop, caissons blown up by bursting shells and the greatest of all prison scenes. The Princess always has the features pictures and you may depend upon it that this is one of the best to be seen anywhere in this country. It is good the Princess has it. No advance in prices. — One day only.

LOUIS PERSINGER COMING

The next event to claim the attention of music lovers will be the concert by our own Louis Persinger on Monday night, November 25, at the Burns. This don't is one of the series of Great Artist Concerts given at the Colorado Springs Musical club and promises to be the most widely attended of a series which is notable for good attendance. Not only is there much interest in Mrs. Persinger's offering on account of his local reputation, but since he was here last time, three years ago, he has made such remarkable strides in his chosen field that critics everywhere have accorded him unstinted praise and proclaimed him as one of the great violinists. His audiences in Philadelphia where he made his American debut and in New York were both enthusiastic, and the criticisms he received from the press of those two cities should have proven very satisfying to his friends. Even those New York critics who have never praised the first appearance of a violinist, have put in a good word for Persinger, and some have placed him among the greatest at their first hearing of him, which is remarkable.

Letters from Colorado Springs people who attended eastern concerts have said that there is no doubt that he is among the violinists of first rank, and some have written that they have rarely heard music so strong in its appeal, as that from Persinger's violin.

Colorado Springs will undoubtedly give him an ovation which will be notable.

AT THE PRINCESS THEATRE

One of the strongest features ever released at this picture house will be shown on Monday, November 18, tomorrow. It is a Kay Bee make in two grand parts, entitled "When Lee Surrenders." This is one of the greatest war pictures ever produced. There was $2,000 worth of powder used in making this picture. There is 1,000 soldiers engaged in battle. It shows a mighty struggle between two powerful forces. Horses and riders shot down in full gallop. Caissons blown up by bursting shells. The great prison scene is worth more than the admission. This wonderful production will more than meet with your expectation. No advance in prices.

MISS TRASK HEARD FROM

Miss Louise Trask, formerly a stenographer of the Citizens Ice and Coal company here, who mysteriously disappeared from her home in Denver, last April is safe and well. The search that has been made for her has been stopped, although her whereabouts are not generally known. She has written several letters to the family of Frank H. Trask, in Denver, but they will not let her where she is until she has permission.
 Miss Trask is well known in Colorado Springs.

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL MEETING

In order that the superintendents and pastors may bring it before their schools, today, the program for the next meeting of the El Paso County Graded Union and Teacher Training school has been completed and announced.
 Dr. S. E. Brewster will deliver another address of special interest to the teachers and officers; his subject being "The Importance of Knowing How to Organize." Another special feature will be the cradle roll conference, under the supervision of Mrs. Samuel L. Garvin, to which all those interested in the care of the babies in the Bible school are invited to attend.

The full program is:
 Devotions — "The Importance of a Knowledge of How to Organize."

DR. JACK POT COMPANY SHOWING GOOD GAIN

According to the report of A. E. Carlton, president of the Dr. Jack Pot Mining company, a substantial gain in the net profits of the mine is shown in the third quarter over the one preceding. The gain is $23,000, compared with that for the entire preceding half year, which was $2,121. President Carlton reports the sinking of the main shaft to the ninth level made possible by the Roosevelt deep drainage tunnel. Ten sets of leasors are at work on the Dr. Jack Pot, and during the last quarter, 393 tons of ore, with an average value of $22.09 a ton, were shipped out.

How would an east front lot, 50x100, in the 1100 block north, at $1,100 suit you? We have it. The Colorado Investment & Realty Co., 7 N. Tejon St. Adv.

FALLS FROM TRESTLE AND FRACTURES HIP

While a Rio Grande cattle train, on which he was riding, was passing over a trestle south of town, about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Joseph Macht, 40 years old, slipped and fell 30 feet to the ground, sustaining a fractured hip. He was taken to St. Francis hospital in an ambulance. Macht was taking a load of cattle from Pagosa Springs to Denver.

CATAPPH IN THE BLOOD

A polluted and impure condition of the blood causes irritation and inflammation of the different mucous membranes of the body, and we call it Catarrh. The early stages of the disease are characterized by such symptoms as a tight, stuffy feeling in the nose, watery eyes, ringing noises in the ears, irritation of the throat, and often hoarseness and difficult breathing. If the trouble is not checked it invades the stomach and other portions of the body and becomes a dangerous disorder. Antiseptic washes, sprays, etc., are beneficial in removing accumulated mucus from the nose or throat, but such treatment can never cure Catarrh. S. S. S. is the one real dependable remedy for Catarrh. This great medicine cures the disease because it purifies the blood and thus destroys its cause. S. S. S. goes into the circulation and removes the last trace of catarrhal matter, and then the blood performs its work of circulating the membranes and tissues instead of depositing impure matter into them to irritate and inflame. S. S. S. cures to stay cured. If you have Catarrh in any form take S. S. S. and cure it as thousands have done. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free to all who write. S. S. S. is sold at drug stores.

Education for Those Above Fourteen

Night Schools Should Be More Varied in Scope—Present Systems Overtax Working Girls—Plea for Continuation Schools
By DR. JANE E. ROBBINS

The new idea of city schools includes proper education of all young people until they are firmly established on their feet as self-supporting citizens. The plan that has been suggested for a city school, a principal is to be placed in charge of the building, to keep it with the aid of heads of departments, in constant day and night for the education of the entire neighborhood.

Various kinds of vocational training must be furnished during the day to the boys and girls; from the ages of 12 to 16. Young people under 16 years of age are not usually mature enough to be allowed to enter any work that is not educational. Employers of labor are beginning to see that stupidity is extremely costly, and that something must be done to increase the efficiency of the working people.

Manufacturers in Bridgeport are giving a great deal of time to the organization of a state day school, which teaches trades to boys. In Cincinnati, the manufacturers are trying to work out plans for having the boys for a part of the time in the school, and a part of the time in factories.

At night the schools in a crowded neighborhood could make a great point of offering to boys and girls over 16 years of age a chance for vocational training and wholesome recreation. The boys of this age who wish, for instance, to be clerks, will often buckle down to the study of bookkeeping with much earnestness.

Under the present bad system, a child of 14 is allowed to work during the day and he should be given at night physical training in the gymnasium and good manual training. Certain boys of this age would also be glad to practice in a band and others become much interested in dramatic literature. Most boys of 14 should be forbidden to sit at desks in a schoolroom after confinement during the day in the shop or factory. In great contrast to a factory boy, however, is the one who has been out of doors engaged in construction work, as he often seems to enjoy the quiet scholastic atmosphere of a regular night school.

TWO NIGHTS EACH WEEK

Working girls under 18 should be encouraged to come to school for definite study only two nights out of the seven. If one set of teachers could have classes on Monday and Wednesday and another set on Tuesday and Friday, with music and general exercises on Friday nights, the schools could be made a much more important factor in the life of young girls. Under the present system of night schools, the girl of 15 is often allowed to undertake school work far beyond her strength, to the disappointment of everyone when she fails to make good.

No ordinary day school teacher should be permitted to teach more than two nights in a week. "Our teacher was so nice before Christmas," one girl said to me, "but since Christmas, GEE!"

In Italy, the school for women and girls is called "La Scuola Festiva." Much can be done in this country by the girls themselves to make the night schools both festive and educational, as they have shown in the evening recreation centers. In every school, courses should be planned for those who wish to prepare in the evening for evening high schools and for colleges. In all these courses, certificates should be given and regular promotions made from class to class. In New York students should be encouraged in these classes to fit themselves for the regents' examination.

The problem of finding teachers for night schools can be solved by closer cooperation with the colleges, which are able through their employment offices to furnish many fine teachers. The best principals should be assigned to night schools and they should be stimulated by their supervisors to do everything in their power to develop originality and fine teamwork among the teachers.

In order to make sure that the city is not investing money which will not be used, every student should be required to make a deposit of one dollar during the first month; this dollar to be returned to those who attend regularly at the end of the school year.

In New York city, a night school even in a discouragingly illiterate neighborhood, will have on its register from 100 to 400 students. Of this number, probably 100 will be foreigners studying English. These classes in English are of great importance to the men, for their employers, and to the country. The men must have some knowledge of English, in order to be promoted as foremen, and in order to understand American customs and laws. In many cases their teachers are the first really fine Americans that they come to know.

A NEW FORM OF PATRIOTISM

The teaching of English to foreigners, as a form of patriotic service, is just beginning to be recognized. Classes for the teaching of English could well be smaller than they are, and the teachers should be encouraged to adopt the best methods of instruction. New textbooks are being constantly published and are in great demand.

That many men and women are eager for such classes no one doubts. I have known an Italian, without the alphabet of his own language, to learn at 35 to read and write English, in order to be able to read the mark on freight cars.

The answer to every question that has arisen since America has been more EDUCATION. Now as we face the great industrial problems of today we see that they will never be solved until every citizen demands that to each boy and girl and to each man and woman, shall be given sufficient education to develop all his powers of both mind and body.

Game Farming

Europe's Experience Teaches Game Farming as Method of Reducing Cost of Living

Game farming is a comparatively new occupation in the United States, but from the outset it has been a profitable one. That, as yet little understood, the quail disease has killed hundreds of birds hatched in captivity. Ruffed grouse and turkeys have also proved delicate when removed from their natural environment. However, a few people have been notably successful in raising these birds. They have realized that the problem is one which must be approached in the scientific manner, and studies carefully the habits of the game birds.

Half a century ago Europe rang with the name of D'Angelo. He was a young man of Palermo, a mountain town of central Italy. He killed the father of his sweetheart's name, and then fled to the hills, and became the famous Abruzzi brigand chief. His method was to capture a traveler, rob him, and then lead him to a precipice. There the alternative was put—a leap to death or a bullet in the brain. He had disposed of a dozen victims before he was captured, tried and sentenced for life. That was 46 years ago. He has just been released, handed 300 earned in prison, and as his lower limbs are paralyzed, he was carried to the railway station and given a ticket for his native village. On the way he met a motor, and was terrified at the strange rushing, humming thing. Then a cyclist came along, and D'Angelo was much perturbed, lest the rider should fall off. The prison officials say that during his long captivity he was never known to ask a favor of anyone or to break a prison rule.

A REMARKABLE PRISONER

From the Dundee Advertiser.

Half a century ago Europe rang with the name of D'Angelo. He was a young man of Palermo, a mountain town of central Italy. He killed the father of his sweetheart's name, and then fled to the hills, and became the famous Abruzzi brigand chief. His method was to capture a traveler, rob him, and then lead him to a precipice. There the alternative was put—a leap to death or a bullet in the brain. He had disposed of a dozen victims before he was captured, tried and sentenced for life. That was 46 years ago. He has just been released, handed 300 earned in prison, and as his lower limbs are paralyzed, he was carried to the railway station and given a ticket for his native village. On the way he met a motor, and was terrified at the strange rushing, humming thing. Then a cyclist came along, and D'Angelo was much perturbed, lest the rider should fall off. The prison officials say that during his long captivity he was never known to ask a favor of anyone or to break a prison rule.

dismayed, then, because they failed at the beginning, and each year sees more people attacking the problem, a solution of which will make it possible to reclaim the suitable land which can be found in every state of the Union today, with the birds which were once so plentiful.

The most recent experiments in this line conducted on a large scale, are those which are being carried on by the American Game Protective and Propagation Association at the game farm in Massachusetts. The association has acquired about 8,000 acres near the town of South Carver, some 40 miles from Boston. The land is ideal for the purpose in hand. It lies six miles from a railroad. Portions of it are heavily wooded, mostly with pine, while there are vast gently rolling stretches from which the big timber has been cut off years ago and which are now covered with scrub oak. There are 30 ponds within the boundaries of the preserve. Some of these have soft bottoms and are filled with a rank growth of water weeds making them ideal for ducks. In others the bottoms are composed of hard sand and supply the kind of feeding grounds in which these birds delight. These ponds are in the line of flight of both ducks and geese, and in the spring and fall they are covered with wild varieties. In the woods and fields there are many grouse and quail, and wild deer are plentiful all over the preserve.

The Undertaking of the Association.

The association's work commenced this spring and it was a big undertaking, because, like the managers of various state farms, those in charge wished to produce results quickly. Quantities of pheasants, wood mallard and pintail ducks, Canada and snow geese and wild turkeys were purchased. From these and some eggs that were bought, hundreds of birds have been raised, but the most interesting feature of the work and that which will prove the most important of it continues to turn out as successfully as it has up to the present time, is the raising of our native quail and grouse.

The authorities of Massachusetts have given the game keepers permission to take the eggs of wild birds, and as these birds are getting a good supply. At the present time banding birds may be seen proudly mothering their strange foster children—from quail that look as much like domestic fowls as birds. These birds are now nearly full grown. Every effort has been made in the handling of these tiny birds to make their surroundings as nearly as possible like what they have encountered in a wild state. After they are a day or two old the young chicks are allowed to run in the grass around the coop where their mother is confined, in search of insects. They are fed on corn, eggs, fine grain and chopped egg.

For the older birds, which are already strong of wing, a large inclosure has been made of fish net. This resembles a circus tent in shape and takes in a rather heavy growth of pine saplings. It is always a source of surprise to the stranger to visit this. On entering there is nothing to be seen but thick brush. To all appearances there is not a single bird in the inclosure, but when the superintendent calls there is a rattle here and there and the young partridges come walking in from all sides, followed by a little black hen scarcely larger than themselves.

The association hopes to arouse widespread interest in raising game birds, both native and foreign. Any one can take it up on a small scale and it is likely to prove very profitable. Birds will be distributed from the association's farm to applicants who will make proper provision for their protection by placing them on land where there is good cover and by agreeing that there shall be no shooting on this tract. The plan is to secure sanctuaries of this kind all over the country, which shall serve as fountain heads from which the overflow will stock the surrounding territory. If the birds are unmolested they will increase so rapidly on a sanctuary that they will be forced to spread out and there will be good shooting in the neighborhood. There will be no danger of their extinction, however, if the rule against killing them on the protected areas is enforced.

The value of game as a food supply is leading more and more people to take up its propagation. Propagated game is the only kind which should be used for market purposes. Game sold in Europe at a very low figure, some people in this country have been led, through ignorance of the facts behind the conditions, to advocate the sale of all game in this country, erroneously thinking that withdrawal of the protective laws would make game cheap. Of course, as is well known, in Europe shooting is only for the rich, but so much game is raised on the large estates by means of game keepers, and so much is shot by the few who have the privilege that there is a large surplus to be disposed of at a low price. The people are pleased for being deprived of the shooting privilege, but being allowed to buy game at a comparatively low figure. Any such method, as European game preserves would, if they became the rule, is intolerable to American tastes, for such conditions are inevitable if our wild game is allowed to be slaughtered for the market. Game might be slightly cheaper at first if this were permitted, but it would soon be exterminated, and there would be no more game. As it has been already in some places, the game laws offer a solution to the vexing problem, that of free shooting for all, and that of supplying the markets, for both the wild covers and the meat shops may be stocked from this source.

THE COST OF WAR

From the San Francisco Chronicle.
The fear of war is consuming the homes of the rural and village populations of Germany, France, Great Britain and the United States in a single generation, according to a bulletin on the school observance of Peace day, which is soon to be issued for the distribution by the United States Bureau of Education.

In discussing the cost of war the bulletin says in part: "War debt began with the Nineteenth century. Not until the establishment of constitutional government had nations any credit in the world of finance. The bond of a king was previously lost security. Since 1800 the war debts of the nations have grown by leaps and bounds. That of Europe as a whole amounts to more than $26,000,000,000, bearing interest at the rate of $1,150,000,000 per year. All these endless caravans of millions represent sums which have never been paid, will never be paid, can never be paid, so long as the present system of national extravagance goes on. Effectively the entire amount now raised by taxation in civilized nations goes into the support of armies and navies. The United States, in splendid isolation from old entanglements without any enemy in the world, and bound by ties of blood and commerce to all civilized nations, spends 75 per cent of her income in this way. The civil or non-military expenditures of Europe are so small as to be negligible."

"At the present rate of expenditure the four countries of Germany, France, Great Britain and the United States will spend in the next 40 years, the life of one generation, for the support of armies and navies an amount sufficient to build 20,000,000 country and village houses at an average cost of $2,500 each. With father, mother and four children in each of these houses they would furnish homes for 20,000,000 of people, which is more than the total present population of these four countries living in villages and the open country. Thus the fear of war is consuming the homes of the rural and village population of these great nations in a single generation."

It is estimated that the total direct cost of the armies and navies of the world born in time of peace is $2,500,000,000, which is the total value of a great and ever-croaking of the whole of the United States. With the completion of the Panama canal, Japanese steamships will probably for the first time pile on the Atlantic seaboard, particularly in connection with the extensive trans-oceanic freight traffic.

PHONOGRAPH MESSAGES FROM AEROPLANES

From the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

A novel and in many ways a most interesting effort to communicate information from a military aeroplane to officers on the ground involves the use of specially built phonographs, one on the machine and one at each headquarters which it may be desirable to have receive the messages. Then in the course of the aerial scouting trip, the observer, or even the pilot himself, dictates into the machine such information as may be considered interesting or valuable. Disk records of a material, soft enough to receive the impression of the revolving stylus, but less breakable than ordinary wax records, are used, and by the expedient of having a special feed on the traverse screw of the graphophone, it is not possible to reproduce the records except on similar special machines. As each record is completed it is placed in a novel protecting case and dropped into the camp where men are waiting to receive it.

SERIES ON AMERICAN SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS.

The Problem of the City

By CHARLES STELZLE.

It requires a fool or a philosopher to prophesy what a generation may bring forth, and one may be about as trustworthy as the other in the matter of venturing an opinion as to the future of the city. It was a titled statistician who reasoned that a city's food supply could not be brought from a greater distance than 35 miles, because this was the traveling limit of cattle, and that this fact would set the bounds of a city's growth. Sir William Petty argued that if London continued to double its population every 40 years, while England doubled its population only once in 80 years, obviously the food on the farms could not possibly supply the city with provisions, as in his day it required one man on the farm for every man in the city. The trouble with Petty was that he based his conclusions upon the supposition that all the factors involved would remain as they were. This is a common fault with many modern sociologists.

Mathias, the great economist, said that the time would undoubtedly come when it would not be possible to supply the world with sufficient food because, while the population was growing in geometrical proportions, food could be produced only in arithmetical ratios. How was he to know that a famous president of the United States would one day seriously discuss the question of race suicide, and that another man, whose name has become a household word, would invent a wonderful harvesting machine, which has revolutionized agricultural life and practice.

Product Newer Civilization.

The problem of the city is by no means a modern one. Nevertheless, the factors which make the city of the Twentieth century possible are of recent origin. The same causes which account for the rapidly growing American cities are responsible for the growth of the cities in foreign lands, for the problem of the city is world-wide. The modern city is the product of the newer civilization. It is the outgrowth of economic and social conditions from which there is no turning back.

In 1800 there were six cities in the United States with a population of 8,000 and over, as follows: Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore, Boston, Charleston and Baltimore—these cities having a combined population of about 200,000 or less, the total population of Portland, Oregon, which ranks twenty-eighth among the cities of this country, in 1910 were more than 2,500 inhabitants or more in the United States, which is a ratio of "growth" or "city" having a combined population of 40,628,882 or 16.2 per cent as against a rural population of 49,348,882, or 53.7 per cent of the total population. Men live in cities because they can raise vast areas of surrounding farmlands of their products. They are able to limit no longer holds. London today eats grain which was grown in Manitoba. The milk supply area of our great cities covers several hundred miles. Whatever other causes there may be said there are many which we cannot enumerate, the social factor is one of the most important with reference to the development of the city. The city provides better educational facilities than does the country. Recreational life is more advantageous. Standards of living are higher. The hours of labor are shorter. There is a better opportunity for social life. These have a strong tendency to draw the country man to the city and to keep the city-bred man there. The cities will unquestionably dominate the nation. What is to be the character of the city in 1920 when it will govern all the people? What will happen when the city outgrows the country?

Incredible Graft in New York.
It seems almost incredible that the grossest forms of immorality should be protected in the first city in America through unscrupulous police officers who are commissioned and maintained to eradicate the evil, but this has come to pass because we have permitted a corrupt ring to gain control of our municipal life. The average citizen is concerned only when the evil somehow creeps over into his lot. He is not at all interested even though the corruption is eating out the heart of the city's life, provided that it does not seem to injure him. This is one of the gravest perils of the city.

We have permitted land speculators to build city cities for us—men who are interested in their own gain and nothing else. The greatest peril of the city is not the tenement dwellers. The greatest peril is the smug, self-satisfied middle-class, which is quite content with itself and with things as they are. They act as clogs in the wheels of progress. These are the people who must be aroused to a sense of their own personal responsibility.

The church is in peril in the city, mostly because the great middle class, of which the church is principally composed, has no hearty interest in the conditions which have developed in the city in recent years. The church is dying, but surely some ground in the city. If the city is to dominate the nation and to stand as the church is counted in loss in the city, it does not require a prophet to forecast the inevitable results.

HOME MISSION WEEK

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. I was hungry, and ye gave me to eat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me.

Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee hungry, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? And when saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? And when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee?

And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these last, ye did it unto me.

This week is to be observed, all over the United States, as home mission week. Any person who has read the series of articles published for the past few weeks in the Gazette, written by Charles Stelzle, does not need to be told that "home missions" covers a far wider range of activities than formerly was included under that term. It used to be—and not so very long ago—that the church thought it had done its duty when it had "preached the gospel" to non-Christians. There are some persons who yet think the church has fulfilled its mission if it holds an occasional revival service.

But more and more the idea gains ground among men and women of the church today that preaching the gospel is a far bigger and wider duty than the old narrow conception of that term. Men who have studied the life of Jesus, with their minds free of all dogmas and creeds, have become convinced that mere preaching was but a small part of his life. He lived to serve; he healed the sick, he raised the dead, he opened the eyes of the blind, he fed the hungry, he drove the money changers from the temple, he scourged the scribes and Pharisees, he comforted those who mourned, he was the friend of publicans and sinners.

There was little dogma in his religion. The two great commandments, that comprise all others, are to love God and one's neighbors. To such noble simplicity did he reduce the myriad laws of the rabbis. Religion, as he summed it up, just the day before his crucifixion, is the parable quoted above, its simply service. And men shall receive the reward for serving him who did not even know they had been serving him; men who have served the weak and helpless, with no thought of reward, but solely out of love for humanity.

The church of today does not neglect preaching. But it is widening its activity. It is placing less emphasis on creed, more on service. In this home mission week the church will study the problems, not only of evangelism, but of social service in every phase. How to help the immigrant, how to better the conditions of wage workers, how to stop intemperance, how to preserve health, how to save girls and boys from the social evil—all these are topics that will be considered in many churches during this week.

The church is awakening to its great responsibilities. It is not too much to expect that a great revival is at hand—a revival that shall awaken in the heart of every man who professes to follow Jesus a deep and abiding sense of the duty he owes to his brethren. A revival that shall so fill with love the hearts of men that will serve humanity, not from a mere sense of duty, but esteeming it as life's greatest privilege.

THE Y. W. C. A.

It is peculiarly fitting that the dedication of the Young Women's Christian association building should take place during home mission week. The work done by the association is in the highest sense a work of service. Who can tell the number of girls who have been helped by the association at the very time they most needed help?

The men and women of Colorado Springs who through many years have stood stanchly by the association, nursing it through the precarious days of its infancy, when many times it seemed it must perish, will surely have their reward. On Tuesday the cornerstone of the splendid new building will be laid. The work is on a firm footing now; it will endure. This very fact will be the all-sufficient reward for those who have so loyally supported the association and its work.

Few cities the size of this have a Y. W. C. A. building. In most places it is thought that enough has been done if the men are provided with an association building. But the women need such work perhaps even more than the men. Colorado Springs does well to recognize this need of the women and to supply it.

For the Y. W. C. A. will supply all the needs of young women—spiritual, mental, physical. It will give them a home, which, otherwise, most of them could not have. It will shield them from temptation; it will furnish them with wise counsel. It will be an enduring monument to the fact that here in Colorado Springs there are men and women whose idea of Christianity is service. And nobly, throughout many years, the Y. W. C. A. will carry on this work among young women, thanks to their generous assistance.

IMMEDIATE REVISION

WE shall not long be kept in suspense regarding the effect of Democratic tariff revision on business. By April 15 an extra session of congress will be at work in Washington for the redemption of Democratic tariff pledges.

Just how drastic will be the changes in the tariff no one can say. It is not likely they will be of such a nature as seriously to disturb business, however. The Democrats will undoubtedly adopt the policy of revision schedule by schedule, and not many schedules are likely to be considered in the special session. President-elect Wilson has promised that the initial revision will not be severe.

The Democrats are wise in beginning their work early. The sooner it is done, the sooner business will be relieved from the present uncertainty. The sooner it is done, moreover, the longer will be the time that the Democrats will have for proving their theory that tariff revision and restoration of competition will cure most of the ills of the present time. Every one, surely, wishes them the fullest possible opportunity to demonstrate the wisdom, or lack of wisdom, of their policies, since the people have declared in favor of the Democratic remedies.

For this reason it is to be hoped that the special session, in addition to revising the tariff, will also pass the Democratic trust elimination legislation that has been promised.

"CUTTING IT OUT"

NO temperance arguments are so strong as the orders, issued by many railroads and great industrial plants, that employees must not drink. To begin with, these orders applied to employees only when on duty. But now many railroads have given notice that there must be no drinking, either on or off duty.

The Union Pacific is the latest to issue such an order. For some time there has been a rule to this effect, but it has not been strictly enforced. It is to be, from this time on. The records of all the employees have been looked up, and all men who drink will be discharged.

Men upon whom depend the lives of others must have clear brains and steady hands. They cannot have these if they are addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors. More and more these facts are being recognized and acted upon, not only by the heads of railroad and other corporations, but by the men themselves. And nothing points so surely to the ultimate extinction of the liquor traffic as this.

OPEN PARLIAMENT

SUNDAY EVENINGS FOR THE PEOPLE.

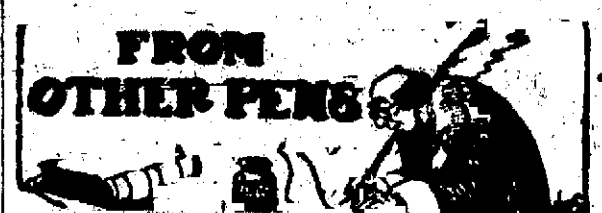

To the Editor of The Gazette:
Among the most instructive agencies possible to any community are such free public gatherings as your city is now favored with in the Open Forum at the Odessa theater, and the Sunday night meetings in All Souls' Lutheran church, the latter occurring every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock and the former at announced intervals.

There are classes of subjects which people cannot get in ordinary schools, or from current literature, and seldom from the pulpit in any effective spirit, but which are intensely interesting and ought to be valuable to anyone with a desire for knowledge. Even by reading articles on such subjects in magazines we seldom can get the sense of reality and crispness that we can when we listen to a speaker who has studied the subject in all its phases, and whose personality makes of it a real and living issue. And when this is followed by free opportunity for open discussion by anyone with a mind to the audience, and all kinds of views and opinions are expressed, it is easy to see why the whole audience grows keen with interest and expectancy and people go away from such a meeting feeling refreshed and stronger for the time so spent.

Let me, then, a visitor to your city, especially commend these meetings to the whole community. If more people realized their value, to say nothing of the actual entertainment and zest they contain, the doors of both places mentioned would be jammed with visitors. When Colorado Springs people can, for the simple going to the building, hear specialists on their subjects, listen to and afterwards take a personal part in such topics as have been presented during the past two months at All Souls' church—for instance, "The People's Interest in Local Government" by Mayor Arnold of Denver; "Modern Prison Methods" by Thomas J. Tynan; "Medicine and Art" by Dr. Carroll Edison; "Race Culture" by Dr. R. W. Coates; and, on this Sunday evening, "The Social Bell" by Mr. George Creel, commissioner of police of Denver—it does seem that they are missing rare opportunities when they permit trifles to keep them at home, because these are among the things which make us grow up intellectually.

Colorado Springs, Nov. 16, G. B. P.

From the New York Tribune.
We may call it luxury, or we may call it simple convenience, but there is no getting away from the fact that the thing itself—to wit, the modern method of doing retail business—is an essential and considerable factor in the increased cost of living. It is not the only factor. It is notorious that in some important respects supply has remained stationary, or has actually decreased, while demand has largely increased, and the old law of supply and demand is not so obsolete that it does not operate in such a case as that. But the manner in which business is done, and particularly the manner in which consumers are waited on and served by tradesmen, must count largely in the problem.

Years ago a housewife went to the butcher's with a basket and carried her purchases home, wrapped in brown paper. Now she telephones to the marketman, or he sends a messenger to her house to receive her orders, and the goods are sent to her in a paraffined or a sterilized wrapper, and in an automobile delivery cart. The telephone, the messenger, the wrapper and the cart and its driver must all be paid for by the consumer. Soda crackers in an ornamental lined box cost more than those sold in bulk from a barrel. Lard in a sealed tin pail or butter in an ornate packet must be more expensive than it used to be when scooped from a tub and dropped into the crock which the housewife sent or took to the shop for it. So with a hundred other articles. They are stored, packed, sold and delivered in much more expensive ways than they were, and the additional expense comes out of the pocket of the consumer. In some respects it is luxury. In some it is convenience. In some it is sanitation. In some it is simple neatness and cleanliness. But, whichever it is, we greatly doubt if the average consumer, even the one who grumbles most at the increased cost of living, would willingly go back to the old order of things, even if by so doing prices could be put back to the old figure. People have become accustomed to the new ways, and now regard as necessities of service things which their grandparents would have stared at disapprovingly as vanity and extravagance. But if they insist upon continuing to enjoy them, they will have to be reconciled to the cost.

Series on American Social and Religious Problems.

The Churches in a Unified Program of Advance

By CHARLES STELZLE.

In the United States the Protestant church has a membership of 22,000,000 and an adherence of 60,000,000, with a Sunday school enrollment of 15,000,000; it has 162,000 ordained ministers, 215,000 church organizations, 210,000 church buildings, with a seating capacity of 60,000,000, and a total valuation of $1,200,000,000.

The church has it in its power to determine the social and ethical standards which shall govern the nation. So that when the organized Protestant forces of the United States get together for an educational campaign on American social and religious conditions, and are really in earnest about the task, it means that something is about to happen. There have been "movements" of various kinds conducted by groups of church people during recent years, but the three months' campaign officially inaugurated by 36 national home missionary societies, culminating in Home Mission week, November 17-24, inclusive, has back of it a group of organizations, which are the most substantial and perhaps the most conservative in the church. They have under their direction thousands of trained workers among various classes and in different sections of the United States.

To most of us "home missions" has to do with the frontier, but modern "home missions," as these men are tackling the job, is no longer a question of geography—it is a matter of problems, no matter where they may be found, and so, while these agencies are still tremendously concerned about the Indian and the Alaskan, the Spanish-American and the mountain-white, they are studying scientifically the question of the immigrant, the problem of the colored people, the women and children in industry, the saloon and temperance reform, the loss of population in the rural districts, the rush of the people to the city, the social movements among the masses, and not the least of the questions that they are working out is how the church may advance with a unified program so as to do away with overlapping and competition, and so that the entire work may be done with the greatest efficiency.

For years the evangelists of the church have been telling us that the world is ready for another great revival. They have been prophesying that soon we shall see a "great awakening." But these prophecies have been only a part of the future glory of the church. In this awakening there will be much of the so-called "evangelistic" preaching, but great emphasis will be placed upon the gospel for which the church has been so long preparing. This gospel will have to do not so much with a spectacular philanthropy, which is supposed to express the kindness of the well-to-do toward the poor, but it will also demand justice and right dealing toward all men. It will deal fearlessly with the question of the exploitation of the little children, of the "sweatshops" and of the "sweated" men. It will demand that men's bodies shall be saved as well as their souls. It will not say less about heaven and its glory, but it will say more about earth and its duty. It will seek to convert men socially as well as spiritually. It will destroy forever that miserable false conception that a Christian man may practice un-Christian principles in his business life simply because his un-Christian competitors find it more profitable to do so. It will insist that every community composed of Christian people must also be a Christian community.

The future victories of the church will be won largely because of its cooperation with the men who in other fields and through other methods have been largely laboring in the spirit of Jesus to reach the same goal toward which the church has been struggling. Not always known as Christians, and sometimes spurned by those who thought that they had a monopoly of the Christian religion, nevertheless they have been controlled by the spirit of Jesus, which, after all, is the truest test of genuine Christianity. Already these men and women have won victory, and the church is beginning to feel the pride of the best leaders of the modern social movement realize that theirs is a religious movement. They are sometimes muzzled and oftentimes distressed because they cannot harmonize their terminology with that of the church, but they are conscious that somewhere there must be a nexus. Leaders in the church the world over are convinced that the church must soon become the leader in a new social propaganda. They are unwilling that the church should surrender to the unscrupulous agitator and the pace which it has made for itself in the social and economic world because of its teachings throughout many generations. With deep concern they are searching for the rock foundation upon which they may build a far-reaching social program for the church.

Some day the leaders in both the church and the social movement will see their way as clear as the sun. That day will witness the coming of the "times of refreshing" the long expected revival will be at hand, and the church of Christ will enter upon the completion of the task which Jesus has been laboring, and upon which it has long been laboring, even though sometimes it saw only "as through a glass darkly."

IS THIS YOUR BIRTHDAY?

Some pleasant event will occur in your family, and some new friendship will commence. Avoid risks, for some slight danger from ill health or loss of money looms near.
These boys today will have great ability, but will sacrifice their real advantages to their love of show. Ostentation will make enemies among the shallow-minded, and unless attracted by some serious purpose, their chances are for a brilliant but short career.

SCRIPTURE

JUDGES vi: 34-40.

But the spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon, and he blew a trumpet; and Abimezer was gathered after him. And he sent messengers throughout all Manasseh; who also was gathered after him; and he sent messengers unto Asher, and unto Zebulun, and unto Naphtali; and they came up to meet them. And Gideon said unto God, If thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said, Behold, I will put a fleece of wool in the floor; and if the dew be on the fleece only, and it be dry upon all the earth beside, then shall I know that thou wilt save Israel by mine hand, as thou hast said. And it was so: for he rose up early on the morrow, and thrust the fleece together, and wringed the dew out of the fleece, a bowl full of water. And Gideon said unto God, Let not thine anger be hot against me, and I will speak but this once: let me prove, I pray thee, but this once with the fleece; let it now be dry only upon the fleece, and upon all the ground let there be dew. And God did so that night: for it was dry upon the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground.

"Learn Cleanliness From Ancients"

Prof. Flinders Petrie, in the Chicago Tribune.

One of the most interesting results of the excavations at the ancient Egyptian city of Merneptah, in the discovery of a stone block of full size and modern shape, carved in a single block of stone, and with a system of flues and heating apparatus, is a surprising discovery. Modern civilization is not so clean, that it can afford to put baths of 2,000 years ago in museums. It is unpleasant to be reminded that we are only just beginning to approach the cleanly habits of the old civilizations.

Begin Civilization All Over.

There seems to be no doubt that the English civilization of today is not so advanced in this respect as the old Roman civilization or the Persian, or even the Norse. Apparently London is still on a lower level of personal cleanliness than the ancient Rome, and we have still much to learn even from the Romans of thousands of years ago. We are apt to flatter ourselves that we are a clean race, but the truth is, of course, that we have an exceedingly bad record, and are only just beginning to go back to the classical ideals of cleanliness. We still think we have done well when we have fitted a bath into a house, but we are doing no more—it is doubtful, indeed, if we are doing as much—as was done thousands of years ago.

Years ago, for instance, an effort to study the washing habits of his race—it is a deplorable record. I doubt if any civilization in the history of the world has had so dirty a period as that from the middle ages to 1800. Unluckily the ideal of the time that dirtiness was saintliness did much to stop progress. The body was held to be unclean, and the more dirt it was taken off, and the dirtier you were the better. Fortunately the new ideas made us wash a little. The idea grew that cleanliness was godliness—but very gradually, and after a stern fight with the upholders of the old ideal. It was not till 1800 that we began to wash at all, and even then it was only in the bath and the bathroom, and our royal palaces were not by any means so well equipped as, say, the Roman palaces, or even the Ethiopian palaces of the third century B. C.

Centuries to Decide to Wash.

We seem to be taking cleanliness rather more seriously now, but I doubt if a Roman of the empire would think much of us. It is not exceptional to find a bathroom in a new house, but how many people have a hot bath every day? The provision of public baths and wash houses is a good step, but much still remains to be done. One might think that the world should have automatically become a cleaner place, but it is clear that cleanliness comes and goes as civilizations come and go.

One civilization never starts where the preceding civilization ends. The whole weary business has to be gone through again. The Roman civilization gradually became clean, and all other civilizations have followed the same program. In its early days a nation does not bother about washing. It is concerned with other things, and must postpone a bath for a thousand years. Cleanliness seldom comes earlier than the mechanical age.

The famous Crank chair, once the property of General Washington, and given by him to Dr. Crank, his family physician, is now in possession of the Mt. Vernon association, and may be seen in the mansion at Mt. Vernon on the Potomac. For several years it was a prize relic of President Andrew Jackson, and was often presented to his house in Nashville, Tenn., of Andrew Jackson came into possession of the relic and finally sold it to the Mt. Vernon association for $7,500.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

NOVEMBER 17, 1882.

There was a severe electrical storm accompanied by a brilliant aurora borealis, which interrupted telegraphic communication all over the United States and Canada.

The Blue river extension of the Denver & South Park railroad had reached Ten Mile creek.

A rehearsal of the opera of "The Sleeping Queen," which was to be performed soon by local talent, was held in the opera house.

The Midland Terminal railroad, which constructed the line of railroad then built from Divide to Midland, as originally projected the Terminal was to be a narrow-gauge line connecting with Colorado Midland branch at Midland.

The large girders crossing the road track were placed in position the Huertano street viaduct.

Prof. W. D. Sheldon, formerly Colorado college, had been appointed vice president of Girard college Philadelphia.

THE HASKIN LETTER

II.—THE ECONOMIC PROBLEM

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Aside from the immense cost of smoke to the owners of the plants which make it—a cost represented in needless coal bills—the national smoke bill represents millions of dollars of economic waste to the public at large. The blighting influence of a municipal smoke pall on the health of a community alone might justify its abatement, for it has been shown at home and abroad that smoky cities are cities with high death rates from all bronchial and pulmonary diseases. In addition to this, the effect on trees and vegetation in general has been shown to be harmful and costly. In the parks of St. Louis each year one tree out of every 25 dies because of the smoke pall. It has been found that the smoke gases of busy cities frequently injure vegetation within a radius of 50 miles. But a more appreciable smoke loss to the community is that inflicted upon the merchant and by him transferred to the consumer.

One Chicago merchant estimated that the smoke insurance cost him $200,000 a year in damaged goods, an expense that one may be sure was included in his price tickets. He further estimated that State street's smoke tax amounted to $2,000,000 a year, and that it played no insignificant role when the price makers were marking the price tickets. Carrying the matter still further, he declared that the toll that Chicago's smoke exacted from its citizens was equal in amount to all the taxes levied by the municipality. Out of the 500,000,000 tons of coal used annually in the United States, less than 15,000,000 tons is actually turned into service and power. The energy of the remainder is wasted in smoke, friction, and other ways. Most of the waste comes from imperfect power systems and might be reduced greatly were all coal using plants to measure up to the best engineering practice. But the amount that might be saved simply by proper combustion methods in existing power plants throughout the country would certainly amount to $100,000,000.

How Railroad Found Out.

These possibilities are illustrated by the experience of a railroad which decided to put its firemen to a test. One fireman was sent out with an engine to draw a train from one city to another, the running time being an hour and 55 minutes. He used 5,000 pounds of coal to make the trip, and had a hard time keeping up steam all the way. Next day, with a duplicate train, and with weather conditions similar, the same engine under a better fireman, made the trip with 4,500 pounds of coal, and in the language of the routehouse, had "the steam against the pop" the whole distance. He left a trail of steamy smoke; the fireman he succeeded left one long streak of bright light.

On a larger scale the experience of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway is illuminative of what railroads have accomplished by adopting proper firing methods. During one period of nine months it reduced the amount of coal burned by nearly 10 per cent, as compared with the same month of the previous year. In the face of an increase of 1 per cent in train mileage and of some increase in the weight of the average train. The superintendent declared that three-fourths of the increased efficiency was due to better firing methods.

Factories have had similar experiences. One plant told its firemen it would pay them $4 a month extra for every month they showed a smokeless stack. They found it was just about as easy to have a smokeless fire as to make black smoke, and the result was that a factory was able to eliminate smoke without any cost for installation, and the $4 bonus to the firemen was more than returned by the saving of coal.

Need Change Power Conversion.

But there are many big factories with small boilers and under-sized furnaces, and they have to be pushed to the limit to furnish enough heat and steam for the day's work. It is with them that neither the careful fireman nor the smoke consumer avails to remedy the situation, and it is these factories that are responsible today for the continuance of the smoke nuisance. They must work under a terrific strain all day long, just as a weaking has

Cripple Creek Mines

GOLD DOLLAR DECLARES DIVIDEND OF HALF CENT

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. The Cripple Creek Consolidated Mining company, after a long and arduous struggle, has declared a dividend of half a cent per share on its common stock. This is the first dividend since the company was organized in 1908. The dividend is payable to the stockholders on or before December 1st. The company's earnings for the year ending September 30, 1912, were $1,000,000. The dividend is a reflection of the company's financial success and its commitment to its shareholders.

DEVELOPMENT PROGRESSES IN PRIDE OF CRIPPLE CREEK

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. The Cripple Creek Consolidated Mining company is making rapid progress in its development work. The company has recently completed the construction of a new shaft, which will allow it to mine deeper levels of the mine. The company is also working on a new road, which will improve access to the mine. The company's management is confident that these developments will lead to increased production and profitability in the future.

KAVANAGH MILL PAYS FOR SELF IN 5 MONTHS

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. The Kavanagh mill is said to be the most profitable mill in the district. The mill has recently paid for itself in five months, a record for the industry. The mill's success is due to its efficient operation and the high quality of the ore it processes. The mill's management is pleased with the results and expects continued success in the future.

TWO SETS OF LEASERS WORKING MODOC MINE

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. Two sets of leasers are working the Modoc mine. The leasers are working the mine in a systematic manner, extracting the ore in a controlled fashion. The mine's management is pleased with the results and expects continued success in the future.

GRANITE COMPANY PAYS DIVIDEND CENT A SHARE

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. The Granite company is paying a dividend of one cent per share. This is the first dividend since the company was organized in 1908. The dividend is a reflection of the company's financial success and its commitment to its shareholders.

VANADIUM IN THE WEST

Bulletin of the United States Geological Survey, Deposits

Vanadium added to steel imparts strength and makes it more resistant to corrosion. It is also used in the manufacture of alloys and in the production of dyes. The United States Geological Survey has recently published a report on the vanadium deposits in the West. The report describes the distribution of vanadium in the region and provides information on the methods used to extract it from the ore.

BIG ORE SUPPLY ON HILL IS READY TO BE HAULED

Special to The Gazette.
CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. A large quantity of ore is ready to be hauled from the hill. The ore is of high quality and is expected to be sold at a high price. The mine's management is pleased with the results and expects continued success in the future.

WILL SOON START UP THE NICHOLLS SHAFT

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 16. The Nicholls shaft is expected to start up soon. The shaft is a new addition to the mine and will allow it to mine deeper levels of the ore. The mine's management is pleased with the results and expects continued success in the future.

FINANCIER'S REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 16. The financial market is showing signs of recovery. The stock market is up, and the bond market is steady. The economy is showing signs of improvement, and the government is expected to announce new measures to stimulate growth. The financial community is optimistic about the future.

to increase the value of the property, he had a fire that happened a few days after he bought the house, and the company did not have complete fire insurance for the house. The company found that it could not exist in any connection with the house and that it had been dismantled the place for 10 years of time with own expense. An attempt was then made to locate the owner with the result that it could be found who claimed it was not his, and he was not the owner of the property. When the court heard all cases for claim to the property, the early history of the old house and the fact that it had come to those men in Lower Manhattan seem likely to finally establish its history.

That American and English buyers are essentially different in their requirements does not yet have seemed to be the opinion of our representatives of one of London's largest stores who have come to this city to study the methods of big department stores. Here in an attempt to find out what the bargain sale which is so popular here in the country is so unpopular abroad. According to their statement, two sales a year are all that the British public will countenance as compared to the practically daily offerings at our places here. Apparently, the attempted introduction of American methods in London has proved to be a failure. Lack of proper handling, since the English visitor points out that one American long accustomed in the operation of department stores with their full bargain sales in the country has been unable to make these methods popular in his London store. For a time the older British stores adopted the American sales methods, but now they have fallen back to the old conservative lines. As a result, English merchants are now about to make a careful diagnosis of our department stores in an effort to discover a cure for the English shopper's aversion to the methods by which our shops are able to turn stock over so rapidly and handle such quantities of goods.

While lost persons are nothing unusual in New York, the police records showing from 20 to 50 reports of such cases, the present week has brought to light the first instance on record, so far as known, of a horse being stolen. Curiously enough, the horse in question is reported at least to be supposed to belong to the city itself, and stands in one of the most crowded spots on the waterfront, facing a police court on the lower East side. For a night back, at least, nobody has known its whereabouts, and from now to which the horse, an old-fashioned brick residence, really belonged. During all this time it has been occupied rent-free by various attacks of the police coming next door, but the official records of the city contain no reference to it and apparently nobody cares enough to trouble to inquire as to its ownership. It is hardly longer the modest old home might have conceivably been for in the center of the tenement that side had

LOW PAY OF PARIS POLICE

Paris, Nov. 14 (AP).—

Police Inspector who was charged with the arrest of the members of the "Reds" in the capital city, are paid a small salary.

The lowest paid of the police received $540 a year, and has received the highest salary for his services. Sergeant Eugene has $500 a year. After him comes Inspector Hahn, who received $470 for his duty work, and $150.

Inspector Lamy has $174 a day and Inspector Sauter and Hahn, who after waiting for the Red-suspicious night, arrested Raymond and his group, do not receive quite $125 a day.

Inspector Naessens, who arrested one of the group, "The Dutch", got a same amount.

It is true that pensioners and officers a certain length of service, but it is not surprising because of the low salary pay. But good men in the Paris department should be appreciated and kept.

Thackeray's paper was taken out of the box, where, along with other papers, a portfolio of his work was put. The contents of their drawers were given up that in 1884, when a municipal tax was imposed on letters, dogs were ordered to be kept in cages. Consequently, a candidate for the mayorship of Milan decorated his Newfound with a scroll inscribed "For the Socialists." The following year this was "imitated" in London, where numbers of dogs were taken on which was written "Vote Thompson!" and "Vote for the Socialists!" It is also said that in 1890, in celebration of the news that the war was ended, the dogs were decorated by the opposition by dressing the Union Jack and other colors on whistles. How the nature of things was despoiled by the use of observers is not stated.

PLANNING the WINTER OUTFIT

Drawings by Dagmar Rasmussen.

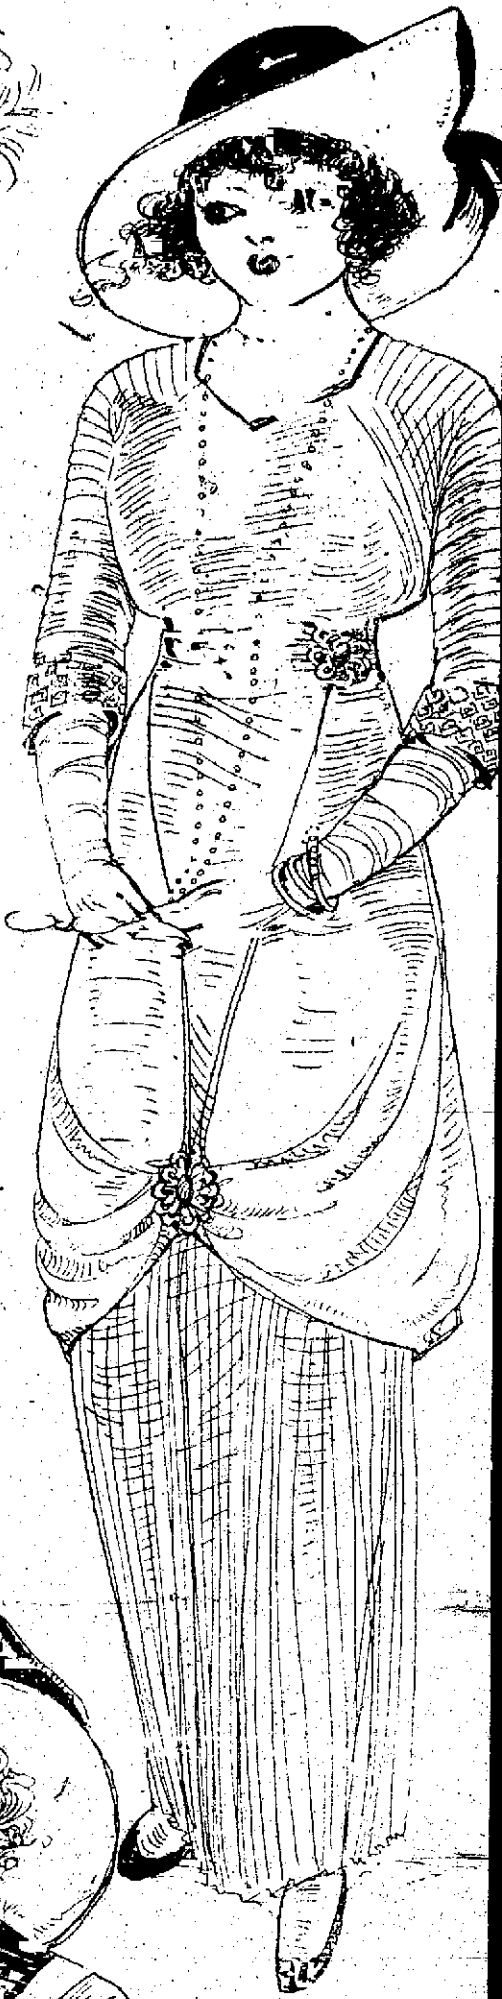

[T]HE smart serge dress is not always easy to wear. Recently shown was one of a simple cut with drapery suggested in a clever way. It is made of dark blue serge and the delightful part is that it may be worn over a glimpse of either white or dark blue satin. The white is decidedly smarter, while the blue is more practical, especially if the dress is to be worn under a coat. The pleated line, an essential of even tailored clothes this season, is given this skirt, not alone by the cut of the overdress but also by the soft plait laid in the front. This is pressed, but not stitched, as is a far away echo of the pommer—the evolution suitable for the fabric and the requirements of such a dress. The back of the skirt is slightly based on the top of the waist band and falls straight in swallow tail effect, only in the movement of the figure is the drapery perceptible. The simple little waistcoat is finished with a cording of the material. The drapery demands that serge in its most supple form be chosen for this model. The cut of the satin glimpse is obvious. The slight fullness at the wrist is gathered into a narrow band finished by a frill of shadow lace or not. The dress opens down the front.

Charmeuse in midnight blue, black, and taupe is much used in the imported models. The frock shown is a smart gown would be charming for luncheon. The waist, which opens down the front, is quite plain, with a small V opening at the neck, finished by a frill of shadow lace and a collar pointing toward the shoulder. This pointed collar is seen on many of the French gowns and is a generally becoming style. The long, tight sleeves are cut in one piece, made perfectly plain, and buttoned at the wrist over deep ruffles of the cream shadow lace.

Evening Gown Materials Sumptuous.
The underskirt is a plain gored model, the drapery formed by a straight strip of the material half a width if the material is forty-five inches wide, with the ends slightly gathered to the waist band and the length of the strip joined in the center back. When Beautiful gray model of charmeuse with panicle effect. The simplicity of the gown makes it especially becoming to girlish figures.

Smart evening wrap of light blue brocade velvet with trimmings of silver puffings and large silver tissue rose.

As a rule, being large. Such striking patterned materials have a way of remaining in the memory, and for this reason are not a wise selection when they must be worn often. This season, however, the women of limited purse may indulge in one garment of this material, if it is carefully handled. The self-brocaded crepe de chine, satins, cloths, and velvets, however, are a different matter and may be more freely used. This season they will mark a gown or wrap as distinctly of the moment.

A street costume might have the coat of brocade silk with a skirt of plain charmeuse or finely ribbed silk of the same color. Or last season's velvet gown could be slightly remodeled and a new coat made of brocade velvet. The collar should be of contrasting satin and the coat edged may be bound or not, as desired, with the material of the skirt. The suitways, which has been steadily gaining in favor, is now quite the most pronounced note in tailored suits. The sloping, backward line dominates the present modes. "It is the movement," as designers say.

Long Coats Smart This Winter.

The length of coats is always an interesting question. For the last few seasons the Paris houses have shown much diversity in this matter. This winter long coats in swallow tail effect will undoubtedly be smart, but thought a bit more conservative, the medium length is a wiser selection.

The effect of drapery is given this skirt in a simple way. Three plaits are laid in at the side front seam, draped toward the back, and caught into the side back panel or seam of the skirt.

Accordion plaited skirts of cloth with jackets of velvet or corduroy are to be much worn this season. These suits are possible for a limited dress allowance, as the skirt can be made at home after the plaiting is done. The jacket should be made by a tailor or dressmaker; coats are rarely a success in unskilled hands. Straight widths of the material are used for skirt, not gored in at the top, and the plaits are the straight accordion variety. Three yards of cloth will make one yard of plaiting. The width should be seamed in and the hem put in before sending to the plaiters, but the skirt is not joined until after it is plaited. The charge for this style of plaiting is 25 cents a yard.

One of the French importations for the winter is of white brocade cloth and black corduroy. The skirt is of the white cloth in straight accordion plaiting, laid under at the top to fit the false waist line. The bodice is of white lace veiled with black chiffon cloth, and the jacket of black corduroy is fastened low at one side and has two square overlapping revers, the under one of white brocade cloth and the upper one of the corduroy. Bits of the white cloth are inserted in the cuffs.

Can Fairly Wrap in Supple Stuffs.

This fashion of contrasting skirt and coat is much liked by the designers, and for the slender figure it is a style not to be ignored. A short length of cloth and another of velvet may often be picked up at the remnant counters at less than half the original cost of the materials by the yard. A smart suit of Cheruit's for morning wear shows a plain side draped skirt of heavy corded dark blue cheviot with short cutaway jacket of gray corduroy, trimmed with collar and cuffs of black satin. Vests of black satin or black tulle, unbuttoning from the neck to the bottom of the cutaway jacket, are smart features of many Cheruit suits.

We can now fairly wrap ourselves in supple stuffs. Not that there is anything voluminous or bulky about the gowns—far from it; there is less amplitude to them than ever. The necks are low, especially in the back. The bottom of the skirts often show an opening Ruffled collars are the newest note in evening wraps. Many of the newest collars for evening wraps would be pretty and becoming on house wraps, but are clumsy and unattractive with coats and furs.

this has been done the drapery comes of itself. The skirt opens in the center back under a separate stiff which forms the panel and quite conceals the seam. Without being extreme, this model has the double advantage of being advanced and simple to make. It would not take one of the models of the party. Five inch charmeuse and the only trimming is the shadow lace. Fifteen to twenty dollars should cover the cost. The model is also suitable for chiffon velvet

In midnight blue, with the collar cloth of white or black.

One of the features which have been insisted upon this winter is the combination of plain and brocade materials. It is noticeable in evening gowns, reception gowns, wraps, and the suits of the more formal sort.

In evening gowns and wraps the most sumptuous gold brocade satins and velours are used, the figures,

NEW WORK AND STENCILING

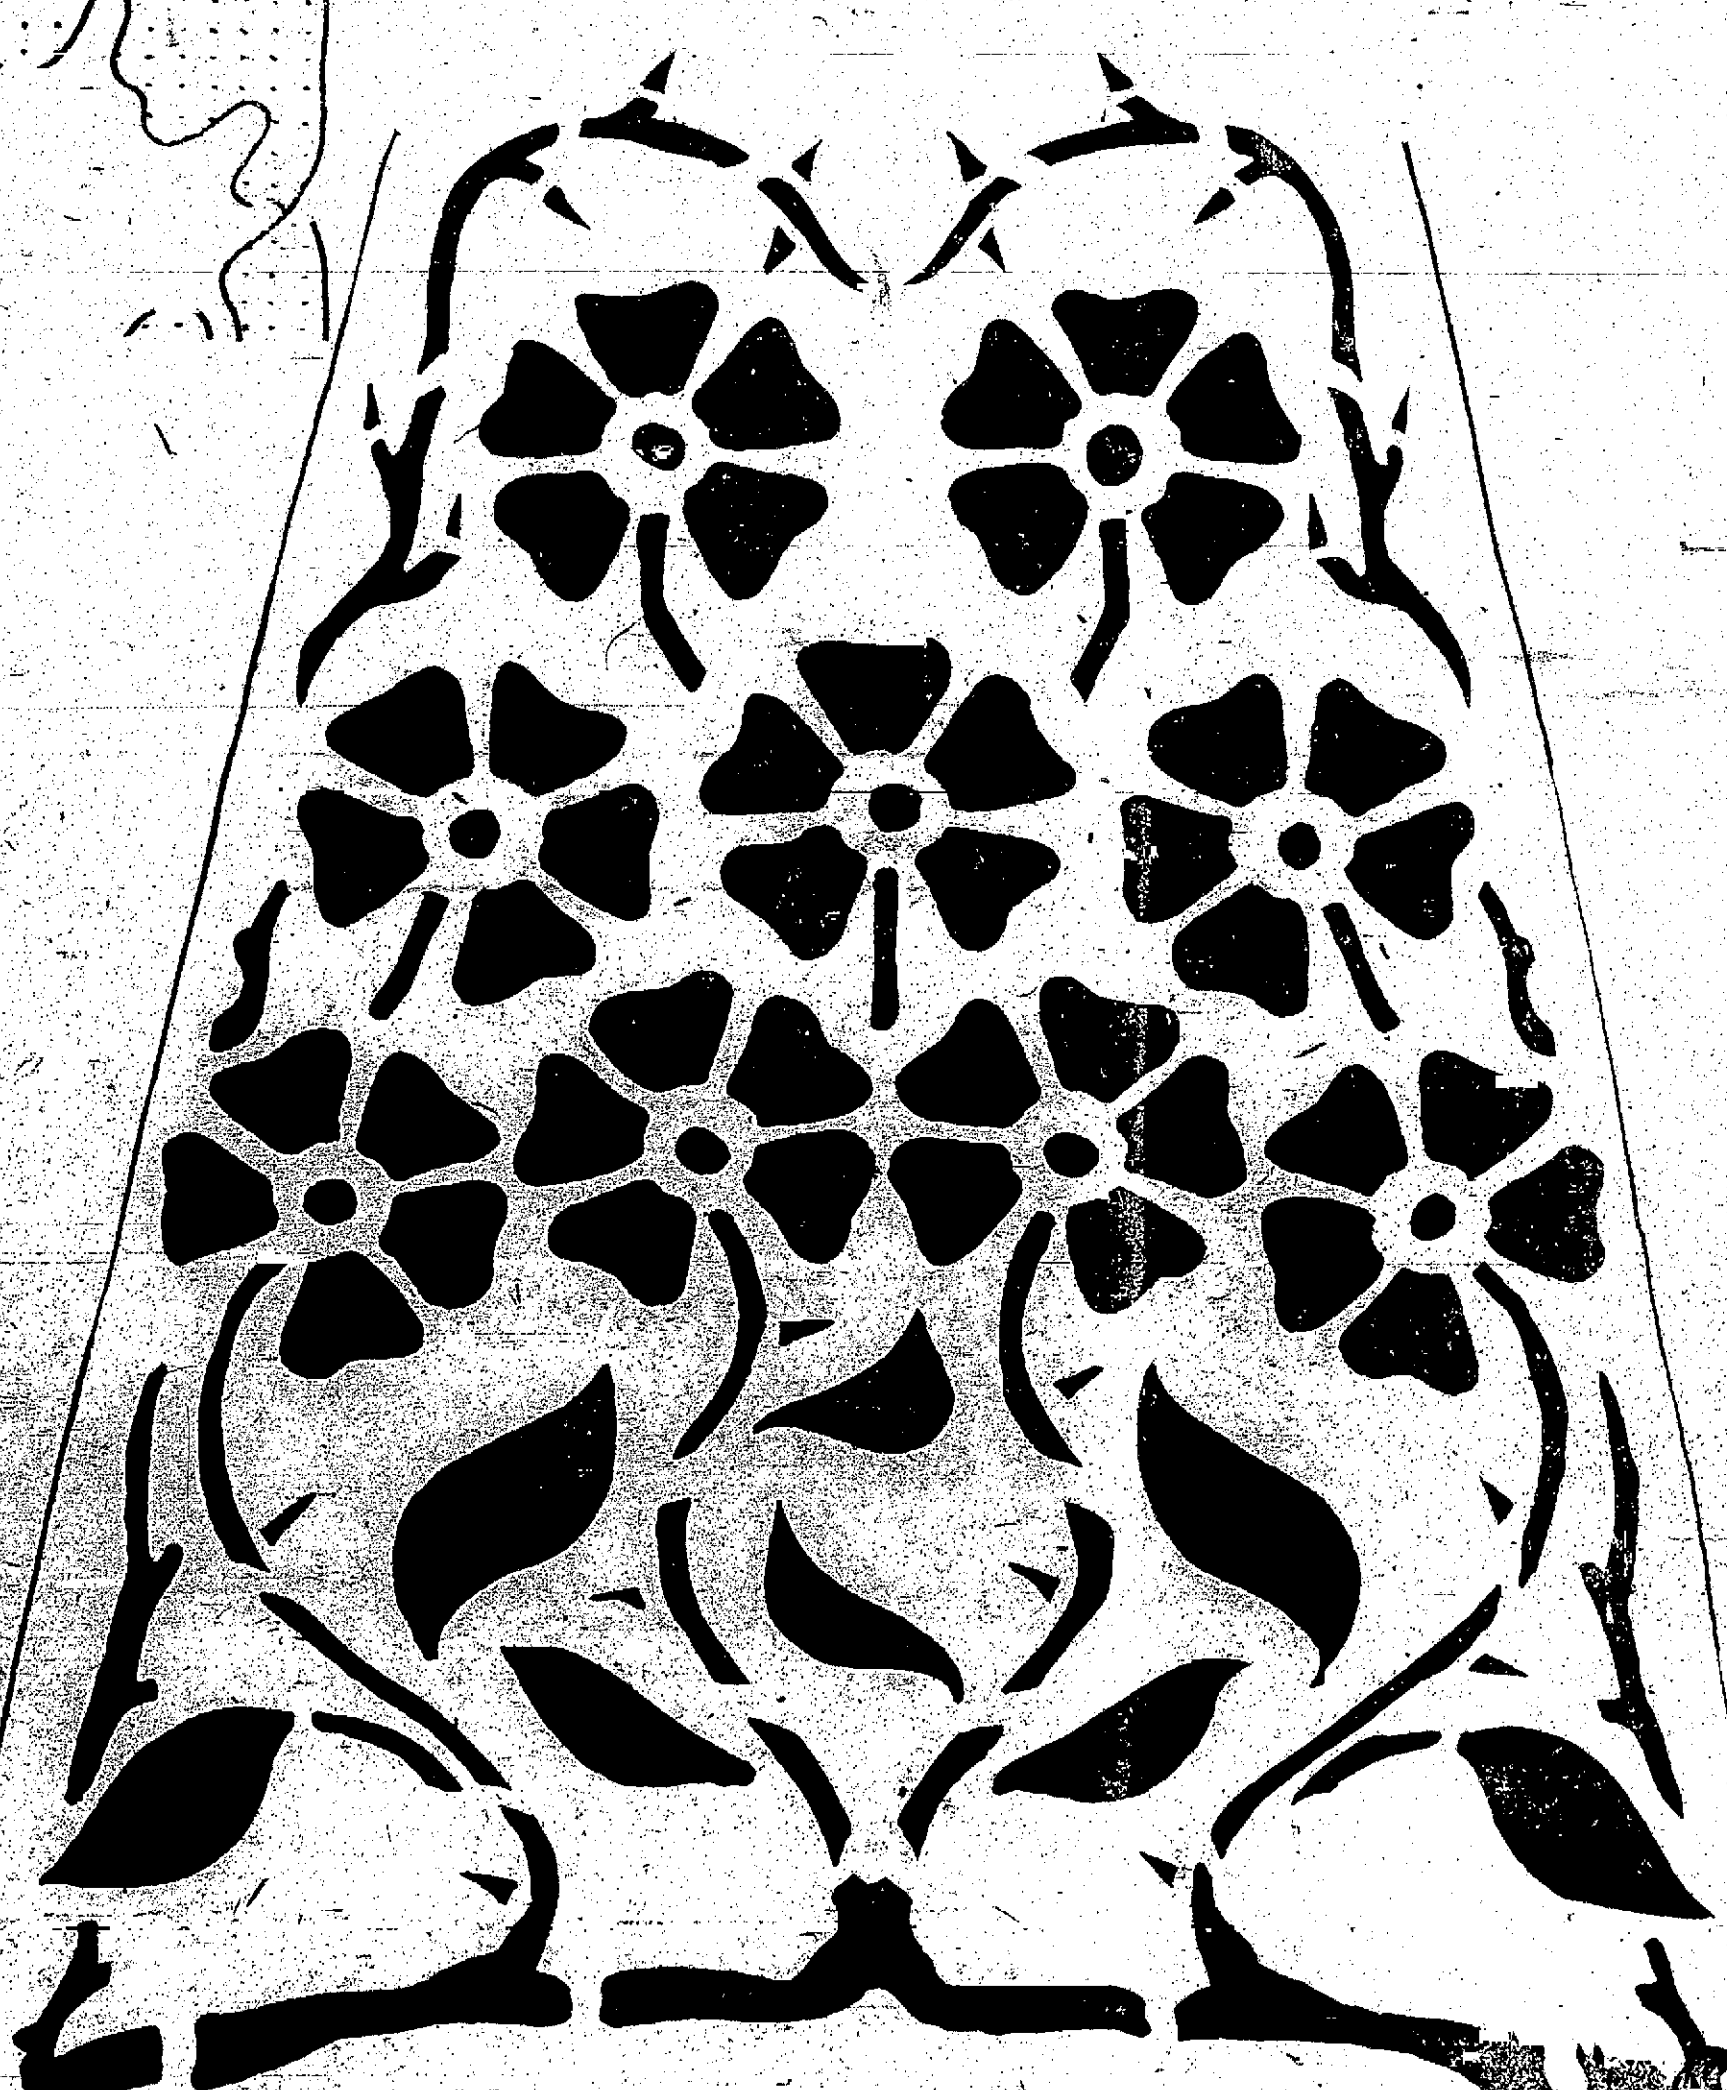

Centerpiece in Outline and Punch Work

DESIGNED BY ELEANOR NORRIS

An unusually beautiful design is shown here. It may be executed on white linen with white floss, or colors may be employed for working. The material used for the centerpiece may be gray or tan linen.

Stencilled Parasols

ALTHOUGH the use of stencilling as a decoration has become so well known as to almost spoil arms for people who desire something unusual, still when used in appropriate places it is always very effective and is very desirable and practical. The oil paint or vegetable dyes which the stencil is applied do not quickly when the material is washed. One of the most useful decorative ways of employing a stencil design is on a parasol, and it is well worth the expenditure of a little time and effort for the sake of a most dainty artistic addition to her costume. One can find no more effective background for her efforts than a stencilled parasol, which is also a novelty that does not soon. If one has not the time or training for drawing and an original design, it is far better to buy one that is properly made, for pretty ones may be purchased for use from the pattern companies. Even if one does not just fancy designs, although many of them are good and effective and are by well-known designers, the addition of a few more branches and blossoms or a butterfly or two will do wonders toward beautifying the sunshade. One can give one a design that is different from any one else's, without the risk of designing the entire stencil. One can also use a parasol with a design of stems and buds and one or two butterflies are far more fetching than the more conventional designs of straight lines. For this reason, although the latter style is more frequently used, which perhaps accounts for the praise and adoption with which the flower design is accepted. If one does not expect to have a number of parasols in her wardrobe, it is to use a plain white sunshade to which a hemstitched border will add a touch of style, and may be made to order at an umbrella shop for a dollar and a half to dollars with a pretty stick or a decorative one if desired may be according to the style of handle. A close meshed linen is the best to use with any stick as it will take the paint more readily. The parasol must be cut and filled to the shape of each parasol before being painted, so that the effect will be symmetrical. The irregularities will be most conspicuous when the parasol is in use. Then on the ground may be used a variety of colors which will make the design harmonize with any shade of dress, a combination of pink, blue and white, or there some blue forget-me-nots, and perhaps a blue butterfly for black and white of style that no other tone

Design for Stencilling a Parasol

A CHRISTMAS GIFT SUGGESTION

The stencil should be pinned on to the parasol only too eager to order them open parasol, with as few pins as possible, at two dollars each so that one is able to make it flat, taking care to put the pins in the same holes each time the parasol is moved, or the paint will go through the holes and make spots on the linen. After the paint is applied with stiff oil paint brushes, not the style called stencil brushes in the shops which are too soft and are apt to smear the paint; the proper kind cost about eight cents apiece, at an art store, and one should have a separate brush for each color. The paint may be thinned a wee bit with turpentine if dry or too thick, but must not be too thin or it will ruin and spoil the whole effect; each color should be mixed ready for use on a palette before starting to paint, and it is also far more satisfactory to try the whole design roughly stencilled on a piece of white paper on a cloth before pinning it onto the parasol, for the effect is often very different when the stencil paper is removed from what one has imagined and cannot be changed when once started on the parasol. After all the panels are finished the open sunshade should be stood up somewhere out of the way for two or three days until perfectly dry, or may be hung on the clothesline in the sun for a day. When soiled it can be scrubbed and scrubbed with a small scrubbing brush and ivory soap until perfectly clean, without fading the colors, if they are done in oil paints, then dried in the sun, which absorbs the oil from the paint quickly without losing the color.

Another effective combination is a pink linen or silk parasol with deep pink roses and columbines interspersed here and there with a white dogwood blossom or two and some lily-of-the-valley, dark reddish brown stems showing a red thorn once in a while—white flowers or pink and white apple blossoms are equally good on a tan parasol of flax or linen, while dogwood and pussy-willows show up wonderfully on a tan or biscuit colored sunshade. In fact a most elaborate collection of parasols may be added to one's Summer wardrobe at the cost of five or six dollars, which is the price of one really chic silk one, which cracks easily and is seldom useful the second season, while the linen will last at least two years and can be made up to exactly match any gown or hat and if four or five be ordered at once may be procured very reasonably, and it is far more satisfactory to wait the three or four days for one to be made up to order as the shops seldom carry the plain linen ones in a good quality and in the required shade, especially in the low price of those made to order. A regular umbrella shop for one to two dollars apiece with the hemstitched border and a very pretty handle with a simple design spread on the handle.

A pretty stencilled parasol is so generally admired that one's friends will

The Macrame Handbag

We have developed a new mania for macrame handbags, and for evening wear these represent a charming addition to the toilet. The foundation of the bag is carried out in ivory or colored poplin, or some other stout silk, the macrame lace completely covering the whole, and being finished with a deep fringe at the base. These bags are looked upon as fully worthy of the handsome gold and silver mounts, which form part of the scheme. Many women, who are clever with their fingers and naturally fond of work of this kind, find it a very simple matter to evolve the bag themselves. Another type of bag which is popular is entirely covered with straw and beadwork. In such and multicolored designs, and this is also often the fruit of the girl's industry when emancipated from the routine of schoolwork.

A Dainty Tea Tray

A novel and most economical way to make a pretty tea-tray was discovered by a girl who is very clever with her wits and her fingers. She first purchased for forty cents a large oval picture frame from a second-hand store, securing a very good bit of natural old wood-work. Then with a piece of stuff, some sand-paper and a little varnish she polished up the wood to look like new, then screwed on two brass handles, one at each end, afterwards cutting a piece of pretty cretonne the same size as the frame, and put it in the frame, where the picture would ordinarily go, covering it with the cretonne. Then she took the frame, packed it securely into place the entire back then being covered with a piece of felt, which she had herself possessed or a most fetching tea-tray, which in the shops would cost from $1.00 to $2.00.

PLANNING the WINTER OUTFIT

[T]HE smart, chic dress is not always easy to achieve. Recently winter was one of a complement with directly suggested in a clever way. It is made of dark blue serge and the delightful part is that it may be worn over a variety of either white or black lace. The white is decidedly smarter, while the blue is more practical, especially if the dress is to be worn under a coat. The new draped line, instead of even tailored clothes this season, is given this skirt, not alone by the cut of the material, but also by the soft plait laid in the front. This is pressed, but not stitched. It is a far away echo of the pompadour, the evolution suitable for the fabric and the requirements of such a dress. The back of the skirt is slightly eased across the top of the waist band and falls straight in swallow tail effect, only in the movement of the figure is the drapery perceptible. The simple little waist-out is finished with a casing of the material. The drapery demands that serge in its most supple form be chosen for this model. The cut of the satin gown is obvious. The slight fullness at the waist is gathered into a narrow band finished by a trail of shadow lace or net. The dress opens down the front.

Charmeuse in midnight blue, black and taupe is much used in the imported models. The frock shown in a smart shop would be charming for luncheon. The waist, which opens down the front, is quite plain, with a small V opening at the neck, finished by a frill of shadow lace and a collar pointing toward the shoulder. This pointed collar is seen on many of the French gowns and is a generally becoming style. The long, tight sleeves are cut in one piece, made perfectly plain, and buttoned at the wrist over deep ruffles of the cream shadow lace.

New York 'Theatrical Letter

By EMORY CALVERT.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The opening of the opera season somewhat overshadowed the usual weekly interest in the dramatic premieres this week. An unusually brilliant quartet of plays, however, served in some measure to draw attention from the rippling notes of the Metropolitan honors and fix it upon the more humble Broadway offerings.

The dramatic menu this week comprised "Bella Donna," with Mme. Nazimova as the principal attraction, which was staged at the Empire; Annie Russell in "She Stoops to Conquer," at the Thirty-Ninth street; "C. O. D.," have wished to present to the audience. But if Mme. Nazimova has irretrievably lost the physical bearing of her role she has created another and quite as interesting a character in her portrayal of Hecuba, rather impossible Mrs. Chepstow. And as the play progresses it is evident that this Mrs. Chepstow, Nazimovized as to speak, is in a large measure responsible for the play's success.

The spirit of the melodrama runs strongly through the new play. In the first act the poison plot is struck through a conversation between Mrs. Marchmont and Dr. Isaacson, who con-again go forth into the world, the whim of fortune and of men. Charles Bryant, as the doctor, made a notable success, with Frank Gilmore in the role of Armine, and Robert Whitworth as Barondi, proved able and earnest actors.

"C. O. D."

Bewildering complication seems to have been the aim of Frederic Chapin, the author of "C. O. D.," which had its premiere Monday night at Gaiety theater. Furthermore, like all good playwrights, Mr. Chapin has made these

Society Play at the Grand 'Thanksgiving

Society en masse is expected to attend the brilliant comic opera to be given at the Grand opera house on Thanksgiving evening, November 28, under the auspices of the City Federation of Women's Clubs.

"The Isle of Dreams" is guaranteed to please all, for the music runs from grand opera to the latest popular "hits"—the dialogue is sparkling throughout—there is a real plot—there are "glorious, gleeful, ditty choruses"—and represented in the cast will be found Royalty, the Emperor and Empress of Japan, the Duke and his "Boys of the U. S. A." College girls, dainty Gipsy maids and belles with all the royal attendants necessary to form a complete picture of oriental splendor of a wedding festival on "The Isle of Dreams."

Hoxes are now being reserved by society folk and by college fraternities. A brilliant audience as well as cast is assured.

spurs the life of Snow White, or cover into the arms of their mothers when the cruel Queen Brangomar seems about to accomplish the death of that very beautiful little person.

But not alone does Snow White, be restricted to women and children for it has been staged with beauty and originality that cannot help but make it one of the popular plays of the season.

The curtain rose on the throne room of Queen Brangomar, where danced six diminutive maids of honor to Snow White, and presently in her garb of raven hair and humble gown entreated Snow White from the solitary. Then rapidly came the Queen Brangomar and the plot to murder innocent Snow White, through the brave chief huntsman, Berthold.

When the curtain rose again it showed a typical bit of fairy forest land, the base of a mossy tree, long vistas of greenward. Here Berthold made his mighty decision and here little Snow White exposed the childlike confidence in her big companion that unwittingly won for her, her life.

Then followed the house of seven little dwarfs and Wanda, who looked at the little hedge of different sizes and of the little chairs and slippers, and here since lunch, sized hungrily at Snow White, who definitely snubbed the Lilliputian lichen.

But the dwarfs and their kindness gave way in turn to a revelation of Berthold's duplicity to his queen. In the witch's cave there were echoes of the child's shrieks of laughter as with a hair tonic, which covered her head with the tails of little pigs, it is unnecessary to name the squealing creature whose cardinal center the kindly Berthold had substituted.

But fast and still faster unwound the plot. Snow White, had many good fairies to charm her prince and they happily ever after. Marguerite Clark, as Snow White, was quite wonderful—this was the consensus of a large convulsion of mothers. Elaine Inesfort, as Queen Brangomar, was a children's Lady Macbeth, of the first water. The other performers, who deserve honorable mention are Frank McCormack, as Sir Dandridge Bonham, the court chamberlain; Arthur Barry, as Berthold, chief huntsman; and Donald Gallagher, as Prince Florimond.

Besides these the cast included a pretty chorus of dwarfs and maids of honor to say nothing of a witch or two to make your blood run cold.

David Belasco's Realism

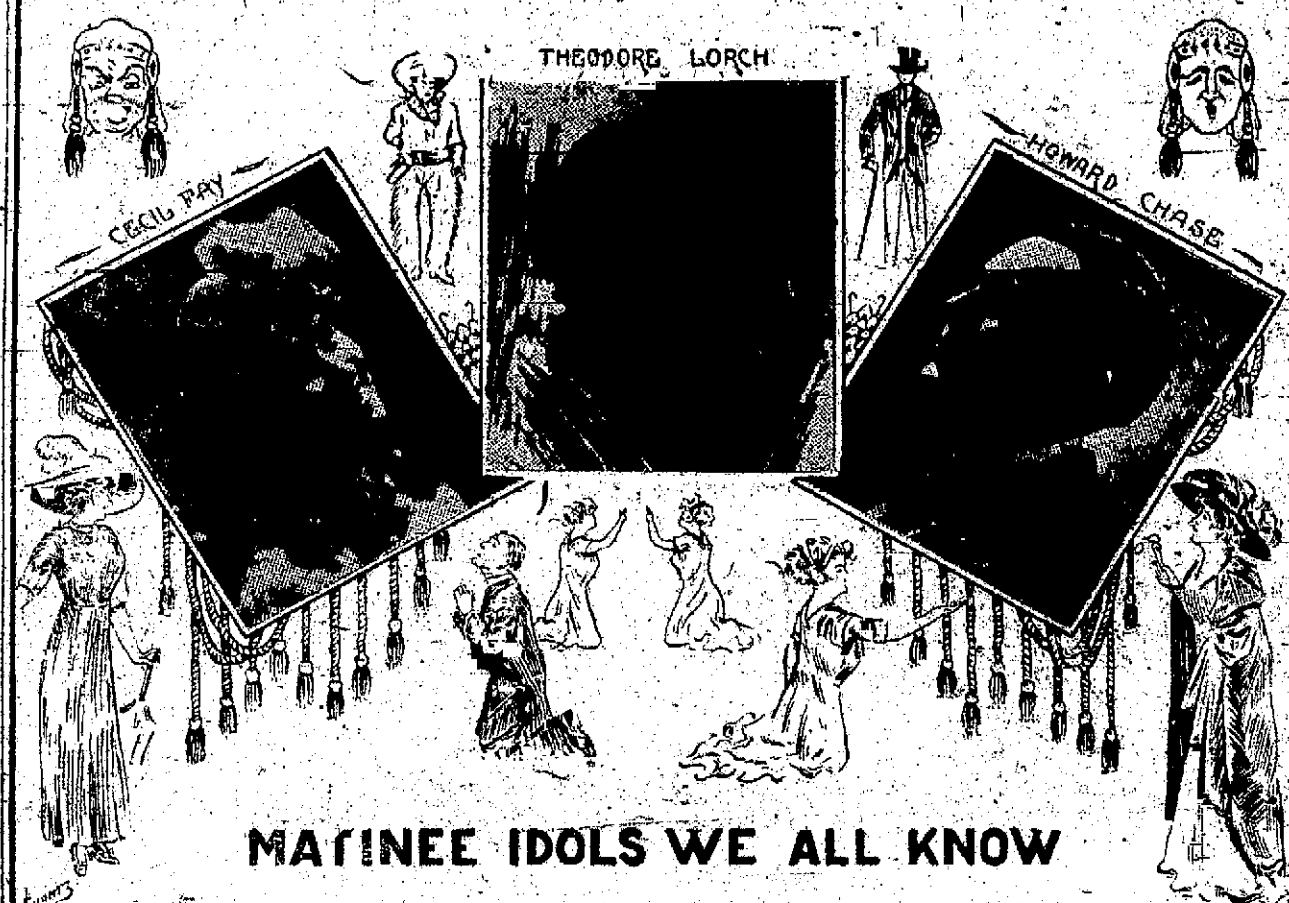

David Belasco may always be depended upon to spring a surprise and not the least pleasure in watching one of his productions is the observance of the artistic subtlety which he does it. Of this, "The Case of Becky," in which he is presenting Miss Frances Starr, offers a brilliant example.

"The Case of Becky" is the story of a young girl obsessed with a dual personality, and the entire action of the play takes place in a sanatorium for the treatment of nervous diseases. The first and second acts are laid in Dr. Emerson's study, and the third in the laboratory, at the top of the house. It is in the latter that Mr. Belasco shows his genius for details, the startling and unusual, and surely nothing quite so novel or sensational has ever been offered to theatergoers in this or any other country.

Dr. Emerson's laboratory is indeed a chamber of horrors for it is here that the great exponent of hypnosis exorcises the evil spirits of those unfortunate people afflicted with dual personalities. Here, spread before the eyes of the audience, is every device and appliance in use by the world's most eminent hypnotic practitioners, and furthermore, the audience is privileged to witness an exact replica of a hypnotic treatment, as it would be administered by such a physician in real life.

Of all the curious paraphernalia, perhaps the most interesting is the little instrument called the somnulator, which, translated into plain English, means the device for artificially inducing sleep. This produces automatically a series of sweet, soothing sounds, each rhythm ending in a gentle "s-s-s-h-h-h!" Just like mother used to hush when she sang bedtime lullabies. To watch the operation of the somnulator on the patient, Professor Balsamo, and to see and hear that sinister figure after he had lulled him into unconsciousness, deliver up the secrets of his ugly past, constitutes a thrilling finale to this absorbing drama.

Miss May Murray will sing the role of Bath in Henry W. Savage's revival of "The Prince of Hohenheim," which had its premiere at the J. K. and Laura Lane Murray, both of whom have appeared prominently in companies directed by Mr. Savage, and who for several years were at the head of their own comic opera organization, which was a fixture at Ulrick's, a famous summer garden in St. Louis.

'The Confession'

From the Morning Star, New Orleans, Saturday, October 12, 1912.

It is not the policy of the Morning Star to accept theatrical advertisements or to commend theatrical productions. But, when a play of the character of James Hallett Reid's great masterpiece, "The Confession," is booked to appear in our city, knowing the splendid story of the drama itself, and the great moral and religious points, which it emphasizes, viz., the dignity and honor of the Catholic priest as a confessor, and the inevitability of the sacramental seal of confession, the Morning Star is constrained to forego its almost frigid rule, and call the attention of the people to the beauty and majesty of this noble play. What touches in such truth and intensity a dogma that lies at the very heart of Catholic teaching and worship. We do this with all the conscious consciousness of the strength and influence that this innovation made upon our rules, will exert upon the public.

The fact that the play has received the endorsement of the most distinguished members of the American hierarchy, among others, his eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, alone should commend it to all who love truth and honor. In this day, when so many immoral plays deluge the stage, when so frequently it deteriorates from the high and noble purposes which should ever be its aim, and which were the prime purpose of the stage in old Catholic days, it is absolutely refreshing, and comforting to see an author throw off the shackles of a stageboard deterioration, and bravely prove that the great popular demand is not for vulgar shows, and risqué play of the passions, but for something higher, better, loftier; for that which lifts human nature from the mere thought of earth, to the dignity and power of kinship with God.

This is the aim of this great play, "The Confession," a priest's duty to God, his church, and his conscience; his fidelity to the sacred vows; his determination, despite the pressure of the state authorities, despite the instinct of fraternal affection, which would prompt him to reveal all and thus save the life of the brother so dear to him, and notwithstanding the tears and agony of his heartbroken mother, to hold inviolate that sacred given to him under the sacred seal of confession, and thus prove that the priest is indeed a man set apart, a son of God, marked with the divine character of the priesthood, and that neither natural human affection, persecution nor death can induce him to degrade that divine gift which is his, the power to forgive and retain sin and the eternal, invisible seal, which is placed upon the lips of the priest in the sacred confessional.

It is a story that, above all, seeks to uphold the dignity and honor of the Catholic priesthood; a story that dares to tell the truth in regard to the confessional, and in telling it unfurls a dramatic story of power, strength and literary merit, seldom equaled in this or in any age. It is, besides a story of absorbing interest, one that runs the gamut of every human emotion from the pure love of youth, the glory and fidelity of maternal affection, the conflicting passions of murderous act and risk with all their attendant woes, to the high and lofty plane, where the priest, as the representative of Christ, maintains with such truth and power, the honor, the dignity, the invisible seal of the Sacrament of Penance.

Though it is a play which, as mentioned above, runs the entire gamut of human emotion, yet, in Mr. Reid's manuscript, there is not a line that would offend the most sensitive. No more absorbing tragedy has ever been conceived, no greater, stage picture and lesson ever presented. Mr. Reid shows that our epoch of Christianity, indeed, provides material for a play of unusual interest, unlike anything else ever produced. "The Confession" will live, for its theme and purpose is too great to die; truth cannot die, right must conquer night. Mr. Reid, in giving to the world "The Confession," is firm in his belief that a much abused public will welcome a play with real life interest, not depending upon the loud, the sensational or the vulgar for its success, but rather upon truth, which, since time began, has always been stronger than fiction.

The management of the play, firm in Mr. Reid's belief, has furnished this play, "The Confession," with a cast of exceptional ability, which has appeared in almost every important production for years. The management deserves the congratulations of the theatergoing public for its efforts in obtaining such remarkable people.

For this important theatrical offering, a scenic production befitting in detail and correctness has been built for "The Confession" and its distinguished cast. "The Confession" enjoyed a most successful run at the Bijou theater, New York. The Morning Star predicts for it crowded houses in New Orleans. Not only every Catholic, but every non-Catholic, especially should see it. We earnestly recommend it to all our patrons.

"The Confession" is a play which, with your permission and cooperation," wrote a facetious Philadelphia theatergoer to Henry W. Savage, the producer, last week, "I can re-establish peace in the Balkans within a very few weeks. You give me the right to produce "The Million" in New York, and lend me several members of the cast now appearing in the piece. I'll present it in the open air at war camps, and the Turk soldiers will laugh themselves to death. Both us will be awarded Nobel prizes; there will ensue a worldwide competition amongst sculptors to fashion busts of us for placement in the halls of fame. Isn't it an alluring prospect?

"How's business at the Eltinge," asked a Rialtoite of A. H. Woods yesterday. "Couldn't be bigger," responded Woods. "Had $300,000,000 in the box Saturday night."

"The success of 'Within the Law' has gone to your head," retorted the questioner. "Not a bit of it," declared the manager, "J. Pierpont Morgan sat in box."

The Burns players produced one of the best comedies of the season last week, an auto comedy, "Speed." I think every chauffeur in the city needed the production.

Visitors to the moving picture theaters recently have been somewhat surprised to see the features of a certain excellent actor, Lionel Barrymore, thrown upon the screen. Investigated disclosed that Mr. Barrymore is following the easy-money scheme of numerous other players of high degree posing for the American Biograph company.

James K. Hackett gave his new play, "The Crook," its initial presentation at the Olympic, St. Louis, Monday night. The performance was rough, but the offering was well received.

"The Right Princess," the Christ Science play, which was first hit at the Ziegfeld theater, Chicago, a year, is to be thawed out and presented at the Alcazar, San Francisco next week.

Ann Murdock, who was seen here "Excuse Me," has been engaged. Joseph M. Gates to play the lead feminine role in Thompson Buchanan new play, "A Woman's Way," which will very likely be renamed "Natal Rehearsals" started this week.

The revived and rejuvenated "Prisoners" show, under Henry W. Savage's direction, opened its new season with a matinee election day, at All town, Pa. In the company are J. Dandy, Lottie Kendall, Arthur H.

For the guests of honor at the big dinner of this season's series, Friars have chosen David Montgomery and Fred Stone. Messrs. Montgomery and Stone have accepted the invitation. The dinner will be given in banquet hall of the Hotel Astor, Sunday evening, December 1. B. Edwards is chairman of the committee in charge.

At the top, on the left, is a scene from the first act of "C. O. D.," which is now playing at the Gaiety. On the right is Violetta Seaton, in "The Gypsy," at the Park theater. At the bottom, on the left, are Charles Block and Mona Morgan, in "The Whip," at the Manhattan Opera house. On the right is Mme. Nazimova, who is playing in James B. Fagan's dramatization of "Bella Donna," at the Empire.

"C. O. D.," a farce by Frederic Chapin, at the Gaiety, and "Snow White," at the Little theater.

"BELLA DONNA"

To those who love Robert Hichins' portrayal of the east, who care to dwell upon the exotic life he so variably strikes, and who are susceptible to the romances he weaves of Egypt's sands and trees, James B. Fagan's dramatization of this famous novel, which was dramatized and staged at the Empire theater with Mme. Nazimova in the title role on Monday night, will prove a source of melodramatic and scenic interest.

There are, of course, some points which these, who worship the works of this romancer of the east, may hold are radical departures from the spirit of the novel. Such, for instance, is the acting of Mme. Nazimova, whose dark and enigmatic beauty bears rather a resemblance to the mysterious east than to the gold-monde beauty of the London drawing rooms, as described by the author. Then too her faulty pronunciation has much to do with dispelling the atmosphere of familiarity which the dramatist seems to clude just as Mrs. Chepstow enters the doctor's office. In the ensuing dialogue between the doctor and his patient the intimate relations between Mrs. Chepstow and Nigel Armine are brought to light, and as a climax for the act Nigel himself visits the doctor, and in answer to the latter's importunities to free himself from his infatuation, tells the physician that he and Mrs. Chepstow are about to sail for Egypt on the morrow.

The succeeding scenes are replete with the Hichins atmosphere of the east. There is the deep blue of the Nile, the never ending song of the Nile boatman to Allah, the feathery palm trees in the distance and the burning sands of the desert. Through this panorama of visual beauty twists and twines the sordid love tale.

The slow poisoning of Armine by his companion, his seemingly inevitable death, the woman's love for Barondi, Armine's final rescue by his friend, Dr. Isaacson—all these in one melodramatic scene—a scene in which Mrs. Chepstow laughs defiance at Dr. Isaacson, admits poisoning her lover and throws herself into the arms of Barondi, only to be repulsed and to complications cumulative and has injected into his plot three distinct sets of characters, hoping, we presume, to go the rural products of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," with their twin-lavender-Mark Twain better.

The scene opens in a farmyard on three rustic characters, the farmer, the farmer's wife and the hired man. Then enter three men who have just escaped from a railroad wreck and their painful lack of raiment gives evidence and next come the farmer's three daughters, accompanied by the three wives of the three railroad wrecked characters.

A thunderstorm serves to keep this interesting cast at the farm house, and the husband, ranking over the farmer's wife and the hired man, the farmer's wife, bribe the farmer to turn them and their escorts out of doors. The storm, however, proves so violent that the women are again driven to take shelter in the house, where the farmer's wife, ignorant of the assignment of furnished rooms to the three men by her spouse, shows each of the women to an apartment already occupied by a man.

Each of the women it so happens has gotten into the chamber of some other woman's husband, and after a scene in which the men are shown garbed in a night raiment that no sane man would ever don and an equally weird feminine attire, there is a hasty curtain.

Then comes the morning after. The three men are about to slip away from the farm, when three convicts compel them to change clothes, the husbands putting on the prison stripes. In this garb they are arrested by two prison guards.

Now for the finale. Three wives forgive three husbands, three young men from the city are to marry three farmer's daughters; the hired man who hoped to wed one of them exclaims, "Oh, h—," and, yes, the initials of each of the husbands form the title of the play, "C. O. D."

Mr. Charles A. Murray as Mr. C. O. Darlington, proved the star of the evening, with the rest of the cast trailing out behind.

"SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER"

Miss Annie Russell's season of nine weeks in "English Classic Plays" began Monday night at the Thirty-Ninth street theater with "She Stoops to Conquer."

This ancient favorite was welcomed by a large audience which seemed to know Goldsmith's production almost as well as the actors. Much applause was accorded the three principal roles. Tony Lumpkin, Kate Hardcastle and young Mr. Marlow. Miss Russell, of course, chose the part of Kate Hardcastle for herself, and a very beautiful Kate she made. In fact her beauty was only surpassed by her acting, and her acting was only equaled by that of Mr. Reichert. Both of these geniuses have been thrown into the shade by the Tony Lumpkin of George Giddens. Giddens was easily the feature of the performance, keeping the audience in roars of laughter by his antics.

"She Stoops to Conquer" will occupy the Thirty-Ninth street theater for the coming fortnight.

"SNOW WHITE"

Out of an ancient fairy tale of the Brothers Grimm, Jesse Graham White has woven a fairy play that should captivate every child from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This play, "Snow White," which had its premiere at the Little theater on Thursday night.

In truth, no small part of the interest of the performance centers in the children whose theater friends and most hated enemies cavort upon the stage. These little ones, gazing open mouthed at the visualization of the oft-repeated story, rise in their seats with cries of delight when the cruel huntsman

W. H. H. H.

A Typical Siren of the Sahara.

THEIR is one thing which it may safely be said, is of universal interest, and that is a beautiful woman. The interest which men take in her is perfectly natural and the reasons for it are obvious. With women it may be due to one of two reasons. Either they are jealous of her beauty and hate her, or they are anxious to know the secret of it that they may become equally attractive.

That is the reason for the beauty hunts in so many newspapers; and it is why so much has been written about the geisha of Japan, the natchig of India, the houri of Persia and the Turkish odalisques. Each of these in turn has been heralded as the most beautiful type of women in the world, and we have avidly devoured every description of them that has fallen under our notice. The different standard of morals under which they all live has also helped to pique our curiosity about them.

But recent events, such as the deposition of Mohammed, the Sultan of Morocco, and the war in Tripoli, have drawn all eyes to Northern Africa and have brought to light a little known race of beautiful women whose charms and attractions surpass even those of the famous geisha. They are the Ouled-Nails. Whereas the geishas are but a class of girls and women, this is a race of women, all beautiful and all distinct in features, language and customs as the harem of the Sultan of the dew.

THEY are the Ouled-Nails, who dwell in the fastnesses of the Atlas Mountains, far out in the Saharan frontier. It is a mournful little corner of the earth, lying out over an infinite waste of sand. But the desert sun gives light and life to the place, and as its brilliant rays fall upon this extraordinary land of women they reflect the barbaric splendor of their garb and clothing and their great, gleaming jewels.

These are neither Arab, Berber nor Moor; they are a race apart, and as such perform the same functions as the Persian houri and the Turkish odalisques. Like them, they are somewhat careless as far as their morals are concerned, and the dark and dusky daughters of the tribe have been dedicated from time beyond reckoning to the profession of amusing men, a profession for which they are systematically trained from earliest childhood. These bedecked and bedazzled beauties have danced their way into Oriental favor ever since the Pharaohs ruled in Egypt, and they are still the staple topic of conversation in every bazaar and native coffee house between the Pyramids and the Pillars of Hercules.

Standards of beauty naturally differ, but most Europeans readily admit that the women of the Ouled-Nail are genuinely beautiful in their own sensuous barbaric fashion. Even the paint with which their faces are coated cannot entirely conceal the perfection of their velvety brown complexion while their wonderful blue-black hair, plastered into heavy ropes and lavishly bejeweled, frames the face in the very manner that made Cleo de Merope so famous. Their hands and feet are small and as perfectly proportioned as those of a Greek marble, while their sparkling eyes, their flaming teeth and their full, red lips bespeak the atmosphere of the harem.

PAINTERS of every country insist on depicting the Arab dancing girl in very scanty attire, but, as a matter of fact, the dress of the Ouled-Nails is particularly decent and proper. Indeed, the evening gown of the average American woman would embarrass and shock these daughters of the sands, for though they are lacking in refinement they are never lacking in modesty. Naturally small and slender, their bespangled and bejeweled bodies are so bunched out about the waist and shapely to display the massive silver anklets that they appear even more petite than they really are.

But the really distinctive thing about the Ouled-Nail is her jewelry. Every centime that she can bestow on such goes toward the purchase of massive gold, bracelets and the like, and these in turn are exchanged for gold pieces, whether French napoleons, British sovereigns or Turkish liras, she is not particular, but gold pieces she must have, and these she links together in a sort of tattered armor, which hangs from her slender, supple neck, whence it falls to her stiff more supple waist and encircles her lithe body like a shining, clanking cuirass.

The preparation of an Ouled-Nail for her hereditary ending beauties soon as she is out of the circle, for the peculiar dances of the desert demand many years of constant muscle training and inflexibly hard practice. From the rising of the sun above the sand dunes until it disappears again behind the distant peaks of the Atlas range, play after day, week after week, year after year, her education never flags or falters. Her muscles are being systematically trained, supplid and developed until they are as much under her control as her slender, bejeweled fingers. Her features, like black hair is brushed and curled and girded and brushed again. She is taught to play the lute, the other and the flute and to sing the weird, plaintive songs the Arab loves, to make the thick black native coffee and with inflexible dexterity to roll a cigarette.

BY the time she has reached her teens, her schooling in these extraordinary arts and graces is complete and one day she climbs into a camel litter and, followed by the blessings of her parents, sets out across the desert, to make her fortune in the dance halls and cafes of Biskra, Tunis and Algiers. She may even wander into Tripoli on the east or Oran on the west, anywhere that fortune may best be found. She is like the daughter of the American farmer who gets out for the city to earn her living at a stenographer's desk or behind the counter of some department store.

By dancing in the native cafes and in the harems of the rich she reaps a more or less abundant harvest, to which many men of many nationalities contribute gold, francs and napoleons, according to their whims and fancies. When the gold pieces into which she promptly converts the earnings are numerous enough to fluke together into the armor which has been described she returns to the tented village from which she came, hides her pretty face behind the veil worn by all respectable Moslem women, sets her daintily slipped feet in the straight and narrow path of virtue, marries some sheik or camel driver and proceeds to bear him children, who, if they are boys, will don the scarlet tunic and showy turban of the Spahi cavalry and serve in the armies of France or, if they are girls, will lead the life of their mother all over again.

Mr. Leder, the English traveler and author, tells an incident which illustrates graphically this type of marriage and the manner in which the people regard it. He was standing on the station platform at Biskra. A tall, thin man of the Ouled-Nail, the son of a sheik of some importance, was leaving Biskra, to which town he had been paying a short visit with his mother. He was taking back with the intention of marrying her a dancing girl named Kadra, who for two or three years had been a resident in the Blue Samia and was celebrated for her beauty.

HERE was this girl after such an amazing episode in her career, quietly dressed, veiled to the eyes and carefully chaperoned by her prospective husband's mother, returning to assume a position of rank and consideration among her own people, with several of her late companions. Tears of sorrow at the parting were pouring down their unlined and painted faces, and they clung to her and caressed her with every evidence of affection. Such marriages are not the exception but the rule.

There is nothing monotonous about their life. It is, in fact, intensely dramatic from earliest childhood until they settle down to married life. Then, of course, they become their husbands' slaves and lead a drab existence until they die. What a contrast with that other period of their lives when all men were their slaves and did everything in their power to win their favor! But to them it is all a matter of course and life loses none of its interest by the contrast.

All the daughters of this extraordinary tribe do not flee from home as soon as they have learned to dance. There is a place for a few of them to remain at home, for they live on the edge of the desert in the track of the caravans from the south, which bring many men who have money in trade and who need to be amused. For these perhaps life is a little more monotonous, because caravans do not arrive every day and in the intervals there is nothing for these Ouled-Nails to do but wait.

But on caravan days there is excitement enough to make up for the weary wait. They scan the horizon day after day and at last they are rewarded by a heavy cloud of dust which betokens the arrival of a band of rich nomads. Then they all redouble in haste to their little huts and make themselves beautiful to receive the newcomers. They stain their nails, they rouge their cheeks and oil their lustrous hair and put on all their jewels, including their cuirass of gold pieces, which envelops their lithe young bodies from neck to hips.

THE arrival of the caravan is heralded by a rapidly increasing noise of shouts and the fall of padded feet upon the sand. At last it stops and the nomads mingle their cries with the wailing of the camels when they make lie down. They have arrived from the interior of impenetrable Morocco, laden with all sorts of riches. The homes of the Ouled-Nail are the first human habitations they have seen since leaving this same place on their outward journey.

By this time all the girls have finished their toilets and are standing on the threshold of their huts, casting crooking glances from the corners of their eyes. They are all beautiful, even the oldest of them; even those who have already a fortune in gold lumps hanging from their necks, and will soon marry. Their heads appear larger than ever under the enormous weight of diamonds and heavy earrings with which they have adorned themselves and the mass of black hair which they have tressed up in the manner of a tiara.

Later, when night has fallen, they will make their way to the Moorish cafes and sing and dance and amuse the men, both camel drivers and merchants, by a thousand poses and contortions of their supple bodies. But for the moment they hold themselves erect and dignified, almost as though they were the statues of priestesses of some strange Oriental cult. It is easy to see by looking at them that their profession is not the same as that of the geisha of Japan; they have not been sold by their parents, nor have they entered it for money or love of it. They are simply working out the customs and traditions of their race.

FINALLY the large red disk of the sun plunges below the distant line of sand. It is the moment when the desert pales so strangely and so quickly, before any color has begun to appear in the sky, always tinted with copper and gold. It is the hour of the Moghreb, and from the summit of a little dome of dried mud and a chant rises in the air dominating everything, a voice which seems to have in it something of the winds the name of Allah, and the nomads select places to prostrate themselves, their foreheads in the dust.

Then, in silence, all the Ouled-Nails, filled with respect, turn with lowered eyes and disappear into the darkness of their dens and leave the men to their prayers.

But the arrival of a caravan is not always a source of joy. When one remembers that these towns are on the edge of the Great Sahara and are often frequented by men from the wild tribes of the far interior who care nothing for civilization or the law, it is small wonder that the early morning silence of the Ouled-Nail quarters are often broken by a woman's muffled scream from some tiny upstairs chamber, the patter of unshod Arab feet hurrying down the steep, dark stairs, the sharp "Qui vive?" of the French vidette, followed by an unavailing rifle-crack and the dimming of the pad-pad of a racing camel, as the murderer flies with his golden treasure trove into the trackless desert. That sort of thing happens continually in Southern Algeria. But the aim of the French law is very long, reaching over into the great sand wastes of the Great Sahara, and months afterward, perhaps, when the criminal thinks himself safe from all pursuit, he feels his grasp as he is swamping through the bazzars of Timbuktu or some other place fifty or sixty miles away as the camel goes. After that comes the trial and a firing party, for in Algeria, as in other lands which they have conquered, the French have taught the natives by such grim object lessons that punishment follows swiftly on the heels of crime.

THE neighbors of the Ouled-Nail on the north are also famous throughout North Africa for their beauty. But their moral standards differ from those of the other dusky beauties. They are the Kabyles, and they share with the mountaineers of the Caucasus the somewhat doubtful distinction of selling their daughters to the highest bidder. Between the Circassians and the Kabyles there is, however, a difference, for whereas the former often sell their daughters in cold blood and take not the slightest interest in what becomes of them thereafter, the Kabyle parent expects, even if he does not always insist, that the man who purchases his daughter shall marry her. A fine Kabyle maiden of 16 or thereabouts, with the lines of a thoroughbred, the profile of a cameo, a skin like brown Liberty satin and a panther's feline grace, will bring anywhere from $100 to $500.

Though the Ouled-Nail and the fair-haired beauties of Circassia combine a remarkable loveliness of feature and complexion with a certain voluptuous elegance, they have not the dignity, grace and insistent attractiveness of the Kabyle woman. Even the humblest peasant girl, grinding the family grain in the doorway of a mud body, possesses a distinction of form and feature which would attract attention in any assemblage.

With all her dignity, however, the Kabyle woman does not rise superior to the African's fondness for personal adornment. She is so laden with bracelets, anklets and necklaces of gold, silver, turquoise and coral that when she moves she sounds like an approaching four-in-hand. Her arrival is likewise heralded by the rock of an exotic and almost overpowering perfume, which, like the celebrated "garden du Ber de Tunis" is composed of nearly a score of blended scents, the odor changing from carnation to heliotrope, to rose, to violet, and so on, every few minutes.

BUT the Ouled-Nail still holds the palm in European eyes for beauty. There is an attractiveness in her disdainful hauteur, the noble movements of her supple body, and the curves of her swanlike neck, which outweigh the attractions of other races. As she comes better known she will undoubtedly usurp fame of the much-valued geishas of the Land of Rising Sun.

It only remains to explain how to reach the land of the Ouled-Nail. Take passage by Algiers, and train thence for some twenty odd hours over a rail which appears to be suffering from convulsions to terminus at Tizi-Ouzou. Thence, on horseback, as of a donkey, or at foot, but always with your guide in front of you and your hand in your pocket and in that pocket a serviceable revolver, may reach in more or less safety the sunbaked land where the Ouled-Nail dwells and the red trot and turquoise of the French soldiers are the signs of civilization.

Come, Have a Look and a Laugh

The Youth—Sir, I came to ask your consent to my marriage with your daughter.

The Old Man—Is your income sufficient to support a wife?

The Youth—It is, and, in addition to that, it is sufficient to enable me to stand an occasional touch from my wife's father.

The Old Man—Say no more, young man. She's yours. Bless you, my son.

"How wonderful it is," said Cholly, originally, "how does know things. Now, there's Fido. I often wonder if he doesn't have some sort of telegraphy, don't you know? Don't you believe he has a sixth sense—a sense that I don't possess?"

"Yes," responded Miss Odier, promptly, "common sense. I believe it is called."

"Do you not toward your wife as you did before you married her?"

"Exactly. I remember just how I used to act when I first fell in love with her. I used to hang over the fence in front of her house, and gaze at her shadow on the curtain, afraid to go in. And I act just the same way now when I get home late."

"That man over there is sitting silent at my nose."

"Well—Probably he's a reporter."

"Well—And why should a reporter stare at my nose?"

"No—they are supposed to keep their eye on everything that turns up, aren't they?"

"I know that I don't play a very good game of whist, but I only play cards for amusement."

Stella—Well, your game is certainly amusing.

Teacher—Tommy, you were absent yesterday and have no good excuse for staying away.

Tommy—Well, it ain't my fault.

Teacher—It isn't? Why?

Tommy—Cause I done my best to think of a good one.

"Mrs. Johnson says that her husband never spoke a harsh word to her in his life," said the lady who gossip.

"That's perfectly true," replied Miss Cayenne. "He stutters dreadfully."

"Wealth has its penalties," said the ready-made philosopher.

"Yes," replied Mr. Comstock. "I'd rather be back at the dear old factory than learning to pronounce the names of the old masters in my picture gallery."

"Yes, I once traveled all over the country with a troupe of trained dogs."

"Didn't you find them difficult to manage?"

"I used to think they were hard to manage, but I've changed my mind since I've been managing a troupe of operatic stars."

"Do you believe in hypnotism?" he asked as looked intently into her great brown eyes.

"I must," she answered with all the bravery could summon. "I know that you are going to kiss me—I am powerless to protest."

"This watch will last a lifetime," remarked jeweler as he handed the watch to the customer.

"Nonsense," retorted the other. "Can't I see myself that its hours are numbered?"

Manoma (dining out)—It isn't polite, Bobby, snuck your lips when eating. You never do that home.

Bobby—(cane) we never have anything to smacking over.

"When my wife and I were first married we to call each other 'Birdie'."

"Do you still do it?"

"No. I call her a parrot and a magpie, and usually refers to me as a jay."

Judge—Yes, sir, I have had some strange excuses and witnessed some moving scenes—very moving.

Judge—Oh, are you a detective?

Judge—No. I'm a shoe shiner at the theatre.

Goldschmidt (addressing a letter)—My Dear Mr. Sebelhausenheimer.

Miss Keston—How do you spell that name?

Goldschmidt—Oh, my dear, I think you've misread the letter. "My Dear Sir," and save a dear tear on de machine.

An English clergyman turned to a Scotchman and asked him:

"What would you be were you not a Scot?"

The Scotchman said: "Why, an Englishman, course."

Then the clergyman turned to the gentleman in Ireland and asked him:

"And what would you be were you not an Irishman?"

The man thought for a moment and said:

"I'd be ashamed of myself."

Bromley, I hear you are going to start her kidding?"

"What have you got toward it?"

"A wife."

"Yesterday," said Jalsop, "I refused a poor request for a small sum of money, and in consequence of my act I passed a sleepless night. The tones of voice were ringing in my ear the whole time."

Your softness of heart does you credit, said son. "Who was the woman?"

"My wife."

The DUCHESS of CHARITY

Consuelo Vanderbilt Originated and Brought Into Effectiveness the Great Project for the Improvement of the Condition of Working Girls and Women.

She Is a Talented Speaker, a Liberal Giver and Is Admired Throughout England for Her Greatness of Heart.

AMERICA'S gift to England—Consuelo Vanderbilt, Duchess of Marlborough and the Duchess of Charity. America's gift has brought a string to it to insure many welcomes and many regretful partings when the duchess visits her native shores, but Consuelo Vanderbilt is the mother of two English lads of the future, and she herself has been fully adopted by the English court.

Her Grace of Marlborough has not been content to remain a social ornament in England. She has fairly become a leader in practical charities. Endless girls and women are the especially distressed she has set out to soothe and help.

In a plain woman we find charitable work, using and commendable—in a beautiful woman it becomes the subject for added praise on all sides, because beauty is so often bent on other things.

Although the Duchess of Marlborough comes from those of the fortunate second class members, it should not be overlooked that her work is sincere and far-reaching in its effects and not for mere popularity's sake.

After W. K. Vanderbilt's daughter married the Duke of Marlborough she and her husband had that certain incompatibility arose. They were unassailable and most of England noted the Duke when a separation was effected.

It is generally conceded by those who are in position to know that the Duchess was entirely helpless in the matter.

It is even said that she was goaded to desecration by her husband's unworthy treatment of

Since their separation she has been devoting herself to work among the poor in a manner that makes her as well as America proud of her. She is fully patriotic and does not lose sight of the fact that America was her birthplace. Were it not for her own, who are to be brought up in England until they are old enough to choose their own residence, the Duchess would probably take up her abode in America as readily as in the days before her marriage.

"I love New York devotedly," she has been quoted as saying. "My friends have been so kind to me throughout my unpleasant troubles that I would dearly like to be among them. It has been a long time since I was over, and it is a long time for one who loves New York as I do. Why, my friends over here give me my devotion to America."

Added to the fact that she has an unusually great deal of common sense, she is exceedingly beautiful and cheerful—which may go a long way in explaining why that with Americans she is the most popular English title holder.

For the most lovable and human side of the attractive Duchess of Marlborough is her decided sympathy and efforts to aid the poor. Here is not the business and often useless charity that reaches its end in its purse, distributes money, and then says that it has done all that is necessary. This is what one usually associates with the charity of the wealthy, but it is not at all characteristic of the work of the Duchess.

She has a practical mind and sees with a clearness that is somewhat remarkable the needs of her about her. She is extremely liberal as far as money is concerned in her charitable work, and what is more to credit, she does not hesitate to devote both her time and energy to working in behalf of the poor. In fact, so strenuous was she in this respect that she was worn down by overwork in February, and the doctor ordered her to Cannes to recuperate. She is a good speaker, and her speeches in behalf of the strata have done amazing good.

The Duchess of Marlborough was the designer and originator of a project for the improvement of the condition of the working girl. She correctly believed that the present manner of lodging the working girl is improper and conducive to bad morals. Her plan includes the building of small houses to accommodate about fifty women each in several districts. This is to be a substitute for one big institution, as poor women cannot afford to travel far to and from their work.

At the present time the only place where poor women can find refuge is in the rescue homes provided by certain religious organizations.

THE present arrangement for lodging the poor are almost directly responsible for a large part of the bad morals found among the poor. The Duchess says that such evils, the degeneracy of the race and the high state of infant mortality can be traced to the absence of moral supervision.

To the effect which she suggests this supervision will not be lacking. In one of her talks upon this subject, she said that the moral training received by a girl is often not practical enough to enable her to withstand the temptations to which she is exposed. For a higher standard of life we must obtain decent lodgings and responsible conditions of life for working women.

A so-called social worker, once addressing a meeting of workwomen, thoughtfully suggested to them that every morning before breakfast that they take a cold tub. But the Duchess of Charity has a real knowledge of the conditions among the poor and goes about in a sensible, practical manner to relieve them. She makes many speeches on the subject, but does not address her remarks over the heads of her auditors.

ANOTHER charitable project in which she has become interested is an East Side Girls' Club. One of the main features of this club is the fact that it gives them an opportunity for physical exercise. A similar project has been tried with great success in London.

"If our women of leisure in New York would interest themselves along the same lines for girls of the great East Side," she remarks, "conditions would be immeasurably improved there. I really think that working girls in New York are as badly off as their sisters in London. In New York they have greater freedom and independence, but immorality is crowding the poorer quarters and the problem of living is getting to be a very serious one for them."

The Duchess of Charity does not let her aid to the poor stop at merely speaking, but has contributed liberally toward charitable projects.

The Duchess of Marlborough was also one of a very distinguished group of patronesses of the subscription in aid of 1861 Mayor Trevelock's Hospital Fund.

Essex Place has been granted to her by Sir Edgar and Lady Helen Vincent for a term of years, rent and taxes free.

Here she has established a holiday home for girls, repasts, girl clerks and shop girls. It is connected in connection with the Young Women's Christian Association. It will form an ideal place for the girls to spend their vacations and should result in a great improvement in their physical as well as mental condition.

Entangled.

THE young man shot into the liverydasher's department as if propelled there with some external force. Arrived, he stared about him, noting a finger nail. The next second, breathless, he stood before a pretty girl at the ribbon counter, who waited, with a sweet smile, on her face, to take his order.

"Er—" he began, nervously. "I want some ribbon for a red baby."

The pretty girl's smile faded.

"Er—behave, not. I mean, some baby for a red ribbon one," he corrected himself.

The pretty girl smiled openly once more.

"Oh, confound it!" spluttered the strange youth. "I really mean some ribbon for a red baby for one—No, dash it! Some red ribbon for one baby—some one's red baby's ribbon—some. Hi! Where's the exit?" And the curious customer at the ribbon counter departed in the same abrupt manner as he had entered.

The pretty girl looked after him, amazement written on her face, but the smile flashed out again as she murmured:

"I wonder if it was red baby ribbon that he really wanted?"

Badly Caught!

The cheerful idiot was staying down in the country—"Vegetable, but Jove!" he called it—and was the natural butt for the wit of the local workmen.

He was on his way home from an expedition to the nearest town one evening, when the landlord of the Red Lion quipped his shuffling form, and sang out:

"Nice evening, sir?"

"Quite," responded the cheerful one, stopping.

"But you don't mean to tell me you've had no fog down here?"

"Not a suspicion, sir," replied the idiot, astonished. "Why?" went on the townsman. "I was on the front of my omnibus this morning, and I couldn't see the horses' heads."

"Well, well! I never," cried the landlord, open-mouthed. "That's funny, sir, isn't it? But I expect it's because the wind happened to be in the northeast."

"That may be," answered the immaculate one. "But the fact that it was a motor-omnibus might have something to do with it, too, don't you think?"

And the landlord collapsed.

Making It Up.

"What!" shrieked the visitor in an indignant voice. "You're going to charge me five shillings for that poky little room I had last night? It's absurd! It's preposterous!"

"Well, sir," replied the landlady. "That's our charge and I cannot alter it."

The visitor nearly burst himself with wrath. "Anyhow, I refuse to pay it," he went on. "Especially as I didn't get a wink of sleep last night. I was walking up and down the whole time, with dragging toothache."

The landlady smiled, as only landladies can smile. "In that case, sir," she said, "I must charge you an extra shilling for wear of the carpet."

WEDDING RING CUSTOMS

THE association of rings with marriage may have come down to us from the Romans, the bridal ring then having been regarded as a pledge for the fulfillment of a contract. It is on record that in England the earliest wedding rings were made of grass or rushes.

During the reign of Cromwell in England the use of wedding rings was forbidden because of the heathenish origin of the custom. But the womenfolk made a great agitation for the revival of the practice, and before long permission to wear these ornaments was granted.

But the plain gold ring is of fairly modern origin. When Queen Mary, who succeeded her brother, Edward VI., was married the London City Council requested her to wear a magnificent creation inset with gems, but she refused and wore instead the first plain ring that ever adorned the finger of an English monarch.

Not a great while ago it was the custom that at every important wedding a number of rings similar to that worn by the bride should be distributed among the guests. At Queen Victoria's marriage ceremony rings which were decorated with the Queen's likeness in profile were given away to the favored few.

Hebrews in the past used some of the most wonderful wedding rings ever created. Their betrothal rings are still magnificent, but plain rings are now generally worn by the married women of that faith and race.

According to their law it is necessary that the ring be of a certain value, and therefore it has to be examined and valued by the rabbi and other officers of the synagogue.

On no account may the ring be a gift or obtained on credit. It must be bought and paid for by the bridegroom.

IN Greece the custom with regard to wedding rings differs entirely from that existing in this country. The ceremony of betrothal there is as important as marriage, and is conducted by a priest. On the occasion of betrothal two rings are used, one being of silver and the other of gold.

These are both consecrated on the altar, and then brought to the couple, who usually wait at the door or gate of the church. The gold ring is placed upon the man's finger and the silver one upon the woman's. But after the wedding service the best man reverses them.

The Quakers and Swiss Protestants do not use any rings at their marriage ceremonies. In St. Kilda wedding rings are made of worsted.

Most of the women of the Upper Bavaria, on the Gongo, wear wedding rings of thick brass around their necks. The more wealthy the husband the heavier is the wife's ring, and in some cases it weighs as much as twenty-five or thirty pounds.

Among the Christians of the Armenian Church children of three years old are often betrothed. The little prospective bridegroom on this occasion presents his future bride with a handsome ring, and is also bound by custom to give her a new dress every Easter until their wedding day.

Perhaps after all the most curious wedding rings are those constructed at a minute's notice, when the bridegroom has been unfortunate enough to leave the genuine article at home.

Times without number these have been cut out of the finger of a glove or made from a piece of cardboard. Then there are even cases on record when certain rings and door keys have been pressed into service at weddings.

KIDNAPED BOY IS FOUND MURDERED

Nationwide Search Brought to Close When Body Is Discovered

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Confession to at least three murders and admission that there are "left men" is the startling disclosure contained in postal cards from the slayer of six-year-old Joseph Josephs, received by the police and made public here tonight. The murder of the Josephs boy, whose entire body was found today in a cesspool near his home in Lackawanna, N. Y., after a search of more than a year, is believed by the police to be one of the long series of similar crimes committed throughout the country by the man, who according to his own confession, has an irresistible mania for killing boys. Today's discovery was made by following the minute instructions contained in the cards.

Young Josephs disappeared on the afternoon of October 12, 1911. It was at first believed he had been drowned, but his father, George Josephs, a prominent merchant of Lackawanna, insisted that the boy had been kidnapped and a country wide search was instituted. The case attracted widespread attention as the father from time to time received anonymous letters warning him to discontinue the search under the threat that his son would be murdered. Today's developments indicate that the murderer took this means of creating the belief that the boy was still alive.

Sends Card to Parents.

It reads: "Wednesday night, December 10, 1902, I enticed Michael Rimcoo Kruek, a newsboy, into the park opposite the arsenal police station. I strangled him and just escaped the officer who found him. Three times I have taken him, 12 times have tried and cannot help it."

Another card dated Boston, Mass., November 9, 1912, and written apparently by the same person, says the writer "unfortunately had too much money" that he "was a prominent fraternal man of a high degree," "honored and respected."

"My son," it continues, "is married and happy. Can I under the circumstances, give myself up? I can, of course, but there are still more murders I have not told you. Shall I come?"

The first postcard received was postmarked Boston, Mass., September 11, 1912, and was addressed to Superintendent Regan of the Buffalo police department. It read:

Sick of Deceit.
"I am sick of trying to fool myself. I have a homicidal mania. I killed

SERBIAN WOMAN TAKING WOUNDED HUSBAND HOME IN FAMILY BULLOCK CART, SHOWING DEVOTION TO CAUSE OF WAR AGAINST TURKS.

Joey Josephs of Lackawanna, N. Y., a little newsy, an Italian, who always stands in the morning on a street corner. The boy knows me well. A crime, I wish to pay the price, but not let the Boston police get me for my family's sake."

The second postcard, addressed to Chief Gilson of the Lackawanna police follows:

"Boston, Mass., Sept. 17, 1912. If you only knew the remorse in my heart on account of the murder I have committed as the result of my homicidal mania, even you and George Josephs would pity me. I am writing this just getting over another drunk to fry and forget the ones I killed, but like Banquo's ghost, it will not down. I am fast going to pieces mentally and spiritually."

The next card, also from Boston, postmarked October 22, 1912, read: "Am so sick of this business that I shall go to Buffalo next Sunday and will call you on the telephone. My brain is worse and all I think of is murder, and I love to kill. Shall kill some kid before I leave here Sunday."

Suffers With Remorse.

Another card, dated October 30, 1912, apparently written as a follow to the one mailed on October 23, read:

"Joseph Josephs will be found in the bottom of an outhouse back of saloon near Doyle and on ridge board. My crazed brain did the deed, and remorse and sorrow for the parents is bringing the results which will soon come to an end. The demon whisky will then have one more victim, making four in all. The next morning I tried to kill a little newsy, an Italian, who always stands in the morning on a street corner. The boy knows me well. A crime, I wish to pay the price, but not let the Boston police get me for my family's sake."

The last card was dated New York, November 12, 1912, and stated that the writer expected to be in Buffalo Wednesday, November 14, and would "call at the police office at 11 a. m. So shall expect you to be in your office."

Signs One Card.

It was signed "R. Deunessor," and was the only card of the series to bear a signature. The writer did not keep the appointment.

The police and federal authorities in Boston and New York have been asked to assist in the attempt to locate the murderer.

Handwriting experts tonight stated that the signature to the postcard was "R. Deunessor," not "Deunesson," as originally believed.

The word is a combination of Latin words meaning "God's response."

LONDON, Nov. 16.—A gold medal for the best nurse in an examination at St. Bartholomew's hospital has been awarded to Miss Helen Thompson Baines, aged 25. She has just completed three years' training and emerged triumphant from the following exacting tests.

Preparing a Tray for an Invalid.

Papers on surgical, nursing, and medical and general nursing. Assisting in the operating theater. Examination by members of the surgical and medical staffs.

Applying a bandage. Reports on her work during three years' probation were also taken into account.

"The great thing is to be cheerful at the bedside," said Miss Baines, last night. "Also, one needs to be very, very patient, and very quiet. An invalid likes to be spoken to occasionally, but a chatterbox nurse is a nuisance."

"Moving about noiselessly in the sickroom or ward is a great asset. A nurse who bumps against the bedstead and is so clumsy that the patient is always aware of what she is doing, is most undesirable. There is an art, too, in arranging a tray."

"The food needs to be set out with care and regard for the patient's whims. Above all things, a natural aptitude and a great perseverance and determination are essential."

British trade unions increased their membership by 204,975 in the last year.

CHAMPS ELYSEES TO BE "HISTORIC SITE"

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The avenue of the Champs Elysees has been classified by the board of fine arts as a historic site. That means that home-ward vandals, clothed in modern and hotel-keepers must beware. It is high time, or rather, we fear it is too late, Paris has been shifting its center of gravity. The smart modistes, the smart jewelers, the whole army in fact, of those who cater for wealth and taste, have been shifting their headquarters from the Rue de la Paix and the Rue Royale and making for the "Elysian Fields."

But that is not the worst. It may offend our feelings that shops should take the place of historic "hotels," but all that does not affect the imperial sweep of the white highway as one looks up from the Place de la Concorde or sweeps a downward eye from the Arc de Triomphe. What is intolerable is that all such shops should have been and should be present be given to the architects' vagaries.

The plans which up to recently have been an import article in our trade, is now becoming a factor in our export trade.

Lameness

Sloan's Liniment is a quick and reliable remedy for lameness in horses and other farm animals.

"Sloan's Liniment expressed anything on earth for lameness in horses and other farm animals. I would not sleep without it in my stable."

NINETEENTH STATE LEGISLATURE WILL BE TWO TO ONE DEMOCRATIC

DENVER, Nov. 16.—From a preliminary count made by Secretary of State Pearce, and submitted to Governor Shafer, the political complexion of the Nineteenth general assembly is shown to be overwhelmingly Democratic.

The senate will stand 24 Democrats, 17 Republicans, and the house of representatives will stand 48 Democrats, 17 Republicans.

It is barely possible, said Secretary Pearce, that the number of Democrats will be two less, which will put the number of Republicans up to 19. However, this is hardly probable.

Following is the corrected personnel of both houses.

TABLETS by "Phicker"

The Fable of the Indian Chieftain

Copyright, 1912, by Felix Mendelssohn.
Out on a Reservation where they Herded the Remnant of the once-mighty Tribe, there stalked and gloomed an ancient Chief, whose name in the Earlier Days had inspired whole Thrills of Terror. This old Redskin had been one of the finest sources of Dime Novel Literature that ever scalped the Paleface. He was the Genuine Goods and no fake about him. He Waylaid the Emigrant Trains; he Ambushed the Marching Cavalry, and when the Troops finally got the old Fellow down and made him say "Uncle" he had a String of Scapls that would reach from Here to South Milwaukee. As long as the Buffalo roved the Plains, this old Boy kept up the Fighting, and for many years after they Penned him on the Reservation it took Three Regiments to see that he Staid in of nights and didn't In-fest the whole surrounding Country with Flame and Fury.

This old Horror had a son who was Carefully Trained in the way that he should sometime Travel. By day he practiced with the Bow and Rifle. By Nights, sitting round the Fire, he Listened to the stories of the Fearful Past, and the Braves told him things to Whet his Thirst for Massacre. When the boy got to be Fifteen, it occurred to the wise old Chief that it would be a Hot Scheme to equip the Heir to Savage Glories with the White man's Wisdom as well as native Cunning. He figured that it would be a Great Stuff to send the Pappoose along to the Paleface School, that he might learn the Craft and Guide taught by the Yellow-Eyes. Then, on returning to the Reservation, he would know all the Dark and Devious ways of Both Races, and Some Day, when the Tribes broke out Again, he could not only lead the Braves, but could cope with the Foxy Fox on equal Terms.

So the Young Chief departed Eastward, and for years the Braves, smoking nightly in the Council Circle, chuckled Hideously when they thought of the wisdom Little Bear must be storing up, and how, some time, he would come back to start the Gay Career of Massacre and Devastation. When the Time came for his Return, however, he came Not, but sent word that he was Engaged, for a little While, in Business, although he had not Forgotten his Father nor the Vengeful Oaths he swore so long Ago.

Then Chunks of Money began to reach the Reservation, and things grew very Comfortable for ALL DOLLED UP LIKE A HORSE, IN WHILE THE BOY WAS FIGHTING, HE FOUND THE BOY.

Strong Men, began to Shoot them over from the Slab. And loud applause, cheers from the many white men, marked all the doings of the Little Bear. When it was all over, and the Little Bear was with the Old Warriors in a Room, the Chief said: "Son, explain to me, your father, why this friendship with the white man?" "I am friendly for the money for the green and yellow wampum," said the Little Bear. "It is the wampum I have earned in the ball-game of the white man that has given you, my father, comfort in old age." "It is true, my son," admitted the old Scalper, "but what, my child, of the oaths of hatred, war and vengeance, that you swore so long ago?" "Well, my father," answered the Little Bear, "think not that I have forgotten the pact I swore. Father, every spring I hold out on my contract till they come through with another thousand wampums, and further, father, whenever I must have full measure of revenge upon the paleface, I can throw the bean-ball!"

DENVER ENDORSES MIDLAND HIGHWAY

DENVER, Nov. 16.—In a rowing meeting at which over 300 members were present, the chamber of commerce, at request of President Nash of the Motor Club, endorsed without a dissenting vote the Midland highway or exposition route for automobiles from Denver to Salt Lake City.

This route is that blazed by A. L. Westgard and C. M. Kittredge. The latter named returned Thursday after a strenuous trip, and in his report to the chamber declared that the new route will be presented at once to the consideration of the automobile manufacturers of the east—who are raising $10,000,000 for a transcontinental highway.

The chamber took up the matter of the Midland highway as a western route for the interior. President E. J. Yetter said that Utah will join with Colorado in the selection of William D. Osborne of Denver and L. E. Armstrong said that Wyoming was in the same frame of mind.

Governor-elect Ammons said that $10,000,000 could be added to the state's resources by free use of the water power here, untrammelled by the government.

President Yetter of the chamber, who presided at the meeting, spoke in part as follows:

"I desire to report on my trip to Salt Lake City from which I have just returned. Three very important things were taken up by the Salt Lake Commercial club. They were the matter of the transcontinental automobile road, to include both Denver and Salt Lake. Utah's assistance in the construction of the Midland highway, and the fact that that state in securing a western man as secretary of interior."

The establishment of the automobile road selected by Messrs. Westgard and Kittredge on their arduous trip is very important to Denver. Mr. Westgard reports both to the automobile manufacturers and to the American Automobile association, for which organization he is official map maker.

The organization formed at Salt Lake City, Grand Junction, Price, Utah and other points to promote our newly discovered road is known as the Midland Highway association, and the route, as 'The Exposition trail.' I pointed out to the Utah people that Denver could send her tourists west by way of the Santa Fe trail. Salt Lake City saw the point and came across unanimously with indorsement of the exposition route.

By address the Rotary club of Salt Lake City and it is indeed the Midland or Exposition route without a murmur. Mr. Westgard believes it is the best route of all across the country, and I believe will go to Indianapolis and recommend it to the manufacturers. Towns along the route in Colorado and Utah are already organizing."

Mr. Nash, president of the Denver Motor club, spoke in part as follows:

"For several years our organization has been making the matter of a transcontinental route. We can't blame Colorado Springs and Pueblo if they are peered at us for selecting the Idaho Springs route. But it doesn't matter if we have 10 trails. We are bound to include Denver in the best of them, and if there are other routes that do not touch us, we can't help it."

Mr. Nash's motion to make the Midland trail the official route of the chamber of commerce was carried without a dissenting voice.

CHAMPION BOY GROWER OF CORN GOES TO FAIR

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 16.—Jerry Moore, the champion boy corn grower of the world, who has raised 228 bushels and three pecks of the golden grain on a single acre, is planning to leave for the United States land show at Chicago, where he will demonstrate how it is possible to have home raised hog and hominy in every household in the south.

Jerry is only 15, but the boy wonder has opened the eyes of farmers in this region, who have been content with 10 or 15 bushels an acre, to the possibility of growing 300 bushels under scientific methods. Second place Jerry Moore in his corn growing competition was Archie Odum, who raised 177 bushels on one acre, at a cost of 23 cents a bushel.

TO ELECTRIFY PART RIO GRANDE SYSTEM

DENVER, Nov. 16.—E. L. Brown, vice president of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, announced upon his return from New York today that the first steps in electrifying the entire Denver & Rio Grande system are to be taken at once.

The first unit to be electrified will be from Helper, Utah, to Salt Lake City, a distance of 121 miles, said Mr. Brown. "This work will cost $3,000,000."

The second unit is to be constructed over Tompkins pass and will involve the electrification of the line from Salida to Minutem. "The Utah work will be commenced at once and we expect to have it completed by July 1, 1913."

These improvements are in addition to the construction of a new double track line of Soldiers summit and the standardizing of the Salida-Montrose line, for which an expenditure of $5,000,000 was authorized by the directors last week.

KIDNAPED BOY IS FOUND MURDERED

Nationwide Search Brought
Discovered

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 16.—Confession to at least three murders and admission that there are "still more" is the startling disclosure contained in postal cards from the father of six-year-old Joseph Joseph, received by the police and made public here tonight. The murder of the Joseph boy, whose entire body was found today in a cesspool near his home in Lackawanna, N. Y., after a search of more than a year, is believed by the police to be one of the long series of similar crimes committed throughout the country by the man, who according to his own confessions, has an irresistible penchant for killing boys. Today's discovery was made by following the minute instructions contained in the cards.

Young Joseph disappeared on the afternoon of October 12, 1911.

It was at first believed he had been drowned, but his father, George Joseph, a prominent merchant of Lackawanna, insisted that the boy had been kidnapped and a country-wide search was instituted. The case attracted widespread attention as the father from time to time received anonymous letters warning him to discontinue the search under the threat that his son would be murdered. Today's developments indicate that the murderer took this means of creating the belief that the boy was still alive.

Sends Card to Parents.

In one postal card mailed from Boston, the unknown writer speaks of murdering a boy in Central park, New York city.

"It reads, 'Wednesday night, December 10, 1902, I enticed Michael Rocco, a newsboy, into the park opposite the Arsenal police station. I strangled him and just escaped the officer who found him. Three times I have taken him. 12 times have tried and cannot help it.'

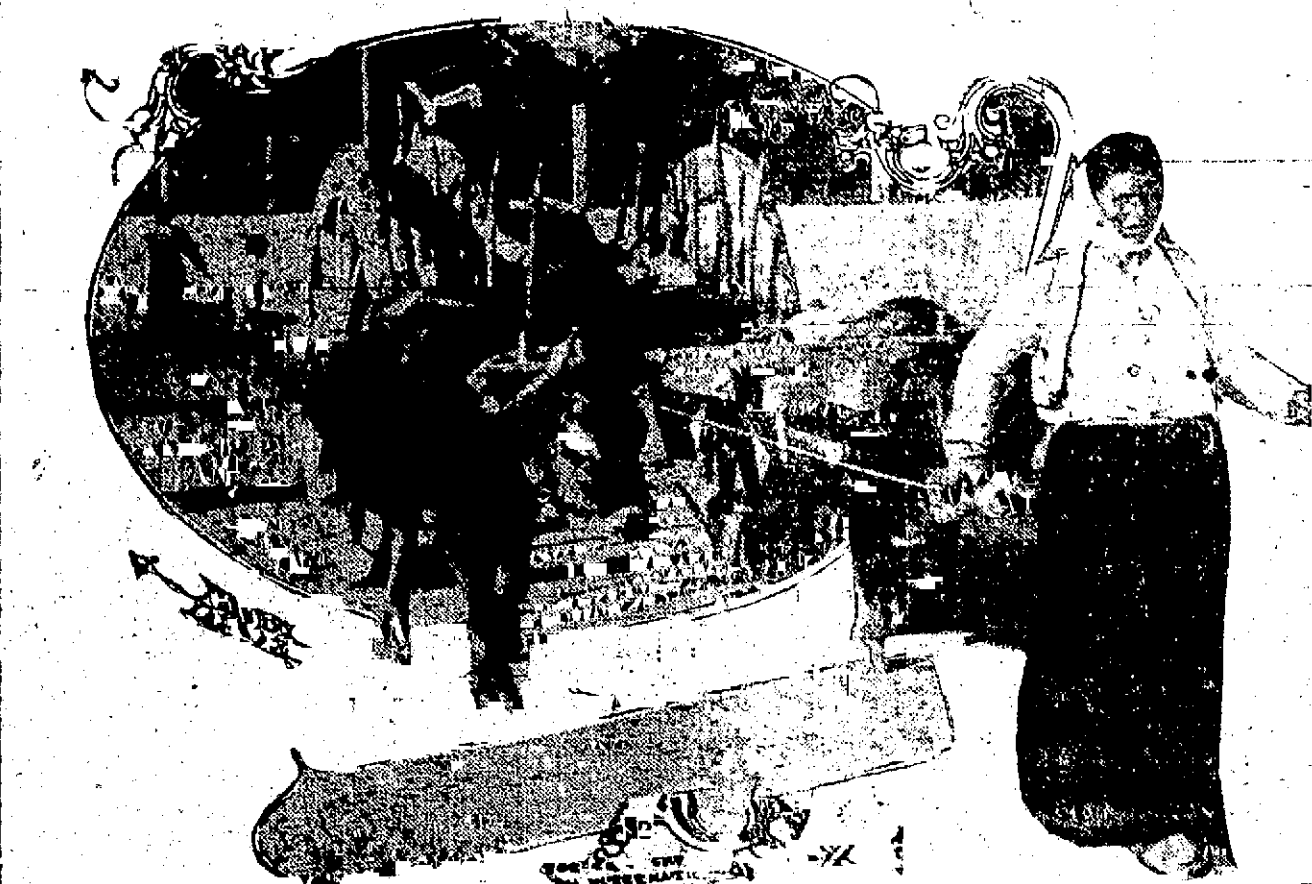

Another unsigned card dated Boston, Mass., November 9, 1912, and written apparently by the same person, says the writer "unfortunately had too much money" that he was a prominent fraternity man of a high degree, "honored and respected."

"My son," it continues, "is married and happy. Can I under the circumstances, give myself up? I can, of course, but there are still more murders I have not told you. Shall I tell you?"

The first postcard received was postmarked Boston, Mass., September 11, 1912, and was addressed to Superintendent Regan of the Buffalo police department. It read:

Sick of Death.

"I am sick of trying to feel myself. I have a homicidal mania. I killed

The last card was dated New York, November 12, 1912, and was addressed to the Boston police and the father.

I am writing this just getting over another drunk-to-try and forget the ones I killed, but like Rocco's ghost, it will not down. I am fast going to pieces mentally and spiritually."

The next card, also from Boston, postmarked October 22, 1912, read:

"Am so sick of this business that I shall go to Buffalo next Sunday and will call you on the telephone. My brain is worse and all I think of is murder, and I love to kill. Shall I kill some kid before I leave here Sunday?"

Suffers With Remorse.

Another card, dated October 26, 1912, apparently written as a follow to the one mailed on October 23, read:

"Joseph Joseph will be found in the bottom of an outhouse back of saloon near Doyle, and on edge board. My crazed brain did the deed, and remorse and sorrow for the parents is bringing the results which will soon come to an end. The demon is sick, will then have one more victim, making four in all. CHAMPS ELYSEES TO BE "HISTORIC SITE"

Assisting in the operation, the examination by members of the surgical and medical staffs.

Applying a bandage.

Reports of the work during the three central operations were also taken into account.

The great thing is to be cheerful at the bedside, said Miss Givens, last night. Also, one needs to be very, very patient and very kind. An invalid likes to be spoken to in a friendly, but a chatterbox nurse is a nuisance.

Moving about housework in the sickroom or ward is a great asset. A nurse who bumps against the bedposts of the white highway as one looks up from the Place de la Concorde or sweeps a downward eye from the Arc de Triomphe. What is intangible is that the nurse should have been and should at present be given to the architect's gaze.

The nurse who is in a room has been an important article in our trade, now becoming a factor in our export trade.

FOUND A ROUND HEAD'S HELMET

From the London Mail.

A helmet, believed to have belonged to a member of Cromwell's army, has been found in the city war of 1642-43. It is a helmet of the type which was used by the English army in the civil war of 1642-43. It has a dome in the center and a small crest on the front. It is made of iron and is decorated with a pattern of small holes. It is now in the collection of the British Museum.

Terrors Defeat Eaton in Easy Style, 16 to 0

Sensational Runs Feature Rout of Slow-Moving Northstate Team

Rolling up a score of 16 to 0 against the heavy Eaton High school team yesterday afternoon on Washburn field, the High School Terrors demonstrated their championship form in every department of the game, and swept the visitors down the field almost at will. By the defeat of Eaton by such an overwhelming score, only Pueblo Centennial, winners of the southern Colorado interscholastic championship stands in the way of the state title.

Although they were not pushed by a stubborn defense, the Brown and White players showed the most brilliant form of the season, and especially the back field, Fowler, Nifong, Shockey, and Captain Taylor. Although aided by the fearless march of the Terrors through the Eaton line, the game seemed to be a foregone conclusion from the start, the Eaton team being out of the contest.

The visitors made their last play in the first quarter, but were unable to gain on any but forward passes, in which the team showed a proficiency. In the third period, Sutherland, quarterback for the locals, through Colorado's line and ran 60 yards to a touchdown. A few minutes later Ott Romney intercepted a long forward pass aimed by Holmes at Muncester, and, running through a

TOM SHOCKLEY, RIGHT HALF

Who performed a magnificent feat yesterday morning in the state back field game of the season. Shockey is a hard hitter, a man who knows football and who has rolled up the majority of Terror points this year.

One forward pass, on all other lines, Muncester had to punt, his kicks being the only redeeming feature of the Eaton showing. Several of the wrestling champ's punts went over 60 yards. Muncester is a brother of Rufus Muncester, center for the Colorado college Tigers, freshman team.

Score in 3 Minutes.
The Terrors made their first touchdown in three minutes after they had kicked off to Eaton. On the snap, and end runs, the ball was rapidly pushed up the field after Eaton had punted, and Shockey took the ball over. Fowler kicked goal. Score: Terrors, 7; Eaton, 0.

Three minutes later, after Eubank had made 20 yards on a galloping tackle around play, Shockey added six more points, when Fowler increased to a 14-to-0 score. A few minutes later, after Eaton had failed to gain, and had punted to Fowler, Captain Taylor of the Brown team through a big cavity in the visitors' line and put over the third Terror touchdown. Fowler missed goal. Score: Terrors, 20; Eaton, 0.

On the next kickoff, after Eaton had punted, Fowler fumbled the ball, and Eaton came within 30 yards of a touchdown, the closest of the game. Muncester tried a placement kick, but missed, and after a severe penalty for

YALE SAVED BY LUCKY KICK IN LAST MINUTE

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 16.—Princeton and Yale, in their annual football battle on University field today, played each other to a 1-0 tie. The teams were so evenly matched that neither had power to rush the ball to a touchdown. Each put up a stone wall defense, and all the scoring was done on goals from the field.

New Eli Hero.
The hero of the game, in the eyes of Yale, was Pumphrey, who, coming into the game for the second time when everybody expected to hear the thickkeeper's whistle, kicking the ball for a field goal from the 50-yard line, tying the score.

It was one of the most remarkable goals from the field ever seen on the Princeton gridiron. Pumphrey dropped the ball and booted it on the rebound. Hardly anyone expected to see the ball soar to the goal post.

As the ball cleared the bar Referee Nellson of Michigan threw up his hands, indicating that a score had been made, and the thousands of Yale men, realizing that the kicking game was over, sent up a tremendous cheer. The Yale subs turned somersaults on the side lines, and Pumphrey was almost carried to his position by his fellow players.

Baker Tiger Star.
For Princeton, the hero of the game was Robert Baker, who made both of the back and orange field goals. Both were easy chances, and came in the second period.

Princeton, the fall outback of the Yale team, was the first man to make a score. In the first period he kicked a goal from placement from within the 25-yard line.

Princeton surprised Yale by the aggressiveness of her attack and the strength shown in her defense. In the first two periods the Tigers actually outplayed Yale in all departments except kicking, in which Princeton had a decided advantage over the Whites.

Game Not Exciting.
Outside of the stubbornness of the defense on each side, and Pumphrey's great field goal, there was nothing remarkable about the game. The forward pass did not figure in the game at all, not in the scoring.

Colorado interscholastic boys' even know Eubank, at tackle, played a wonderful game in all departments. He worked in the center of the line, showed up in good form. It is unnecessary to say anything about the backfield, which probably has no equal in the Rocky Mountain region.

Coach Bain was pretty well satisfied over the showing of his team. During the last week in order to get a team to back the Terrors, the students were offered tickets to the game to a team in a suit and play against the regulars. Twenty responded to the call, and Bain gives much of this credit to the youngsters who responded to the call.

Big Scores Made.
In the three high school games the Terrors have played they have tallied up scores of 22 to 0 against La Junta, 61 to 0 against Manual of Denver, and 22 against Eaton. Centennial comes here next Saturday with a strong team, and there will be work on the Terror field this week.

WYOMING WINS A GAME.
LARAMIE, Wyo., Nov. 16.—On a field made slow by the storm of last week, the University of Wyoming today defeated the Nebraska State Normal at Chadron, 25 to 0. The visitors came nearest to scoring in the last period and were prevented only by the whistle.

Lawrence and Rogers did star work for Wyoming, 10 points being made in the first two in the second, seven in the third and six in the last, mainly through their great work.

The visitors were weak in fielding and lacked in weight.

AUSTRALIAN RUGBY WINS FROM CALIFORNIA STARS.
BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 16.—The All Star Australian rugby team defeated the All-California 15 on California field today, 12 to 8. In the most thrilling rugby game seen in California since the English sport was adopted.

The Australians demonstrated again their ability to play football with their feet, winning three tries in the second half in this way. This gave them nine points. Their poor goal kicking lost them six points, but a score made by goal from placement on a penalty score gave them their total of 12 points.

California made five points in the first half on a quick try which was converted to a goal by a perfect kick. The second half they got a penalty goal on an offside by the Australians, giving them eight points in all.

COLLEGE BOARDING CLUBS BATTLE ON THE GRIDIRON.
The Eastern Boarding club of Colorado college defeated the Pierce Boarding club team yesterday morning on Washburn field, by a score of 12 to 0. Tom Sazano, a popular Japanese student at the college, was the star of the game for the Eastern "prime eaters," while Frank Hall, a former Terror star, played good ball for the Pierce team.

J. R. Richards Calls Team From Field and Penn. State Wins, 1-0

J. R. RICHARDS,

Former Tiger and Terror coach who produced a state championship team at Ohio State university this year, and who is claimed to be the best coach in that state. Richards created a sensation yesterday when he called his team from the field in the game against Penn. State, charging rough play tactics on the part of his opponents.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16.—Five minutes before the end of the game between Pennsylvania State university and Ohio State university, after the easterners had outplayed the local team by 47 to 6, Coach Richards of Ohio withdrew his team from the field because of the alleged rough play and the officials gave Pennsylvania State the same by a score of one to nothing.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 16.—After having been elected to the first football championship of Ohio that Ohio State has won since 1908, the Scarlet and Gray are destined to lose a capable coach.

Coach John B. Richards, who virtually won a permanent home in Columbus because of the fine work of his charges, will sever his connection with the university at the close of the season. He will enter upon the work of directing the athletics of the ladies on the Ohio city playgrounds in Columbus. Ohio State students and alumni will mourn his departure. He has given to Ohio State that to which her adherents always believed she was entitled to, but rarely secured, the football championship of Ohio.

His game has been registered in the records as the most successful football coach O. S. U. has had in about a decade.

Others had had the players, but seemed to lack the drive to get the best out of the material at hand. Richards had a splendid sense and also had the drive.

U. OF C. LOSES TO KAN. AGGIES

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 16.—Kansas State Agricultural college defeated Colorado university 14 to 8 here today in a football game in which all the scoring was done in the first and last periods.

Colorado played the locals off their feet at the opening of the game, making a touchdown after six minutes of play. A 40-yard run by Slattery on a forward pass, and another forward pass netting 20 yards contributed materially to this touchdown. Glendinning failed to kick goal. Colorado then kicked off and the local players carried the ball by line plunges to the Colorado 26-yard line. An end run by Sims gave the Agricultural college a touchdown and they kicked goal.

Neither team showed any advantage in the second or third quarters. The advantage in the last quarter was all with the locals, who made another touchdown and kicked goal and were about to push the ball over the line again when the game ended.

CHICAGO DEFEATS ILLINOIS, IS SECOND

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 16.—Second place honors in the "Big Nine" football race will be fought out between Chicago and Minnesota, at Chicago, next Saturday. Chicago's 10-to-0 victory over the University of Illinois here today, put it in the running for second place and relegated the local eleven to fourth place in the final standing.

Chicago's scores were the result of a touchdown, a goal from touchdown and a place kick. Kennedy went over for the touchdown in the first period, after Gray had placed the ball on Illinois' three-yard line. Sellers kicked goal.

In the third period, after Chicago had advanced the ball to the 25-yard line of Illinois on a forward pass, Sellers scored two more points when he booted the ball between the goal posts from placement.

Illinois braced strongly in the third period, after playing an open game, but could not plug holes in Chicago's line for substantial gains. For Illinois, Siskman, Rowe and Woolsten were the chief ground gainers. Norman Gray and Pierce did the best work for Chicago.

MINES BEAT D. U.—HARPER STAR OF GAME

DENVER, Nov. 16.—The Colorado School of Mines defeated the University of Denver here today 10 to 0. Both teams used close formations almost entirely. The weight of the Mines eleven and the brilliant work of Quarterback Harper in carrying the ball accounts for the victory of the visitors.

Harper kicked a field goal in the second quarter and then when Denver was forced to punt, he ran the ball back 45 yards to Denver's eight-yard line and after two plays he carried the ball through right guard for a touchdown. Thereafter Denver took the aggressive and in the last quarter threatened the Mines goal.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 16.—Suddenly shifting from the old-fashioned game to brilliant open play Michigan scored two touchdowns in rapid succession in the fourth period of today's football struggle, with Cornell and closed the season with a 20-to-1 victory.

It was anybody's game when the final period started. A forward pass had given Michigan a touchdown in the first quarter and a similar play helped Cornell to tie the score in the second period. In the third quarter neither team scored, but time and again Cornell forced Michigan back toward her own goal post.

Michigan Aggressive.
Michigan braced wonderfully in the final period. Aided in punting by a brisk wind, the Wolverines became the aggressors and a Cornell fumble in the middle of the field paved the way for victory. Craig gained 25 yards on a delayed forward pass and a long pass, Thorpe to Pontius gave Michigan the winning touchdown. The punt out was wide. Then the spectacular play of the game occurred. Hill punted to quarterback Huelbe, who, after dodging his way through the entire Cornell field, ran 60 yards for a touchdown.

Penn. Victor Over Carlisle Indians

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16.—Playing a fast game from the beginning, the University of Pennsylvania football team gained a victory over the Carlisle Indians this afternoon, 34 to 20. Until the middle of the last period the result was in doubt. This is the first defeat of the Indians this season.

Thorpe's running with the ball was the best seen here for many a day, and each time he was used he gained ground. The Indians did not play a consistent game. They fumbled several times, and each time Pennsylvania, through close following of the ball, was enabled to recover.

Nebraska Rallies in Last Quarter and Defeats U. of Kan.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 16.—After battling for three periods, here this afternoon, in their nineteenth annual football contest, Nebraska rallied in the fourth quarter, after Kansas had kicked a field goal and won by a score of 14 to 3.

The Cornhuskers kept the ball in Kansas territory during the first period, but in the last three quarters play was on Nebraska's ground most of the time. Twice during the final period, after Nebraska had defended her goal, when Kansas had worked the ball to the two-yard line, the Scarlet and Cream, with long runs, carried it over to the Crimson and Blue line. Today's victory keeps Nebraska in the running for the Missouri valley championship.

Shortly after the beginning of the fourth quarter, Kansas carried the ball to Nebraska's 30-yard line. Vendome kicked the ball over the bar and scored a field goal from placement, giving Kansas three points. A few minutes later Captain Frank broke through the Kansas line and raced 70 yards for a touchdown, and Towle kicked goal.

Kansas fought back desperately and recovered a punt on Nebraska's 25-yard line. A kick at line failed, and Kansas attempted another forward passing play. On the line, the Crimson and Blue again attempted a forward pass, the ball landing squarely in the arms of the Nebraska left end, Howard, who ran 75 yards for another touchdown, and Towle again kicked goal.

Tigers Lose Struggle With Utah, 43 to 0

Worst Defeat in History; Mormon Smash Line for Big Gains

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 16.—The University of Utah today defeated the Colorado College Tigers by the score of 43 to 0, the most complete victory over the Coloradans in history of contests between the two teams. Utah played straight football throughout the game, scoring two touchdowns in the first period by straight line bucks. The Tigers held the second period, but were unable to gain on any but forward pass formations, in which the team showed a proficiency. It was the only flash or form displayed by the visitors. In third period, Sutherland, quarterback for the locals, through Colorado's line and ran 60 yards to a touchdown. A few minutes later Ott Romney intercepted a long forward pass aimed by Holmes at Muncester, and, running through a interference smushing being very fierce.

In the second quarter the Terrors braced and held Utah for downs on the 10-yard line, twice preventing the heavy Mormon backs from picking over for a touchdown. But by backfield men lost the ball, the Tigers were able to make downs.

C. C. Forward Pass Good.
The forward pass work of C. C. Holmes and Muncester was the general play of the Tigers, several occasions the big colored man would shoot the ball for 35 yards to waiting players to stop rout, but the fresh men did not prove the Coloradans' chances.

For Utah, Fitzpatrick, at end, and Sutherland, at quarter, while Ott Romney, who took his place at halfback, showed form in his open field running.

There were several changes in the Utah lineup today, but changes seemed to have strengthened the team rather than weakened it. Utah played a hard, fast, thorough, breaking through.

A BIG UTAH FACTOR
Mickey Fitzpatrick, Mormon end, who played a stellar game against the Tigers in Salt Lake City yesterday, Fitzpatrick's open field running was a riddle to the local tacklers.

field of Tigers for 45 yards, scored a touchdown. At no time was Utah's goal endangered, and the visitors played a ragged game, tackling and

BADGERS WIN CHAMPIONSHIP OF BIG NINE

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 16.—The Badger proved a superior fighting animal to the Gopher here today and tonight the title of football championship of the "Big Nine" last year held by Minnesota, belongs to the husky eleven from Madison, Wis. The score was Wisconsin 34; Minnesota 0.

Never since the old time rivalry between Michigan and Minnesota has there been such interest in a Minnesota game as was evidenced today, a crowd estimated at 20,000 filling every available space at Northrup field.

Wisconsin's driving backs—Bright, Lendberg and Van Riper, stand out as the particular stars of Wisconsin's backfield, Gillette showing up but little except in his booting, which was greatly superior to that of eight Shaughnessy or Hayward.

While Wisconsin's backs won the game for the Badgers, its line until the last presented a stone wall to the Gophers' fierce attack, concealing behind the Minnesota shift. Then it became a punting duel between Gillette and Shaughnessy and occasionally Hayward, with the Wisconsin man having the better of the argument. Only in the last 10 minutes of play did Minnesota attack dangerously and threaten the Badger goal.

Dartmouth Holds Harvard to 3-0

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 16.—Harvard, using only a part of its reputed offensive tactics, defeated Dartmouth today, 3 to 0. Harvard played a conservative game. Its goal line was never threatened by the Green Jerseyed team, and its principal batteries of attack to be used against Yale next Saturday are still uncovered.

The only score of the game was a field goal in the third period, by Brickley. Harvard's star kicker, Brickley had three other opportunities to score in the same way, but a fluky wind or hurried kicks spoiled each attempt. Engellhorn of Dartmouth, tried two place kicks, each from the 40-yard line, but both went wild.

Lack of a few seconds additional time robbed the Gophers of a touchdown. The end of the game came here as Brickley was about to lunge himself forward for the final thrust.

FORMER GOPHER STAR INSANE
TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 16.—Famous eight years ago as a plugging halfback on the University of Minnesota football eleven, Harry Aselien was committed today to an asylum for the insane at Fort Steilacoom.

His derangement resulted from an injury he received on the football field from which he never recovered. Thrown on his head, his spinal column was severely wrecked. Soon after he left college.
